IT'S A "CADILLAC AMONG CADILLACS"!

There are many ways in which we could describe the new Golden Anniversary Cadillac. We could say, for instance, that it is the most beautiful Cadillac ever built. Or, we could say that it is the most luxurious of all the Cadillacs. Or, again, we could say that it offers the finest performance in Cadillac's great history. But it seems to us that the best way to describe this wonderful Golden Anniversary creation is to say simply that it's a Cadillac among Cadillacs. We know, of course, that this is a tremendous compliment to pay a motor car. But we know, too, that it is a compliment most richly deserved. Why not come in today to see and drive this great new Standard of the World? We know you'll agree that it is a fitting climax to fifty years of ever-increasing quality and prestige.

Cottage Colony Society Life

RECENT VISITORS TO PALM BEACH were the Marquis and Marchioness of Blandford, who divided their time between the Lantana ocean front estate of the Harold Stirling Vanderbilts and the Hypoluxo island villa of Lord Blandford's grandmother, Mme. Louis Jacques Balsan. Lord Blandford is the son of the Duke of Marlborough, a frequent visitor at Palm Beach, and before his marriage to the former Miss Susan Hornby, was considered by columnists and intimates of court circles as a possible husband for Princess Margaret Rose.

While here Lord and Lady Blandford were feted at several small luncheons and dinners, and made an appearance at Seminole Club where they attended the Sunday buffet, and afterward he teamed with Mrs. Michael G. Phipps to play in the tombstone golf tournament.

Recently a prominent member of Palm Beach and international society revived memories of former days when she resumed the name she was so well known by not only in Palm Beach but wherever smart people gather. Countess Dorelis became once again Mrs. Jay J. O'Brien, a name that was always synonymous with the glamour of the international set.

A marriage of importance in Palm Beach and Philadelphia where both families are known was that of Miss Mary Van Sciver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Van Sciver of Philadelphia, and Mr. Roscoe Tate Anthony jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony of 6 South Lake Trail.

"Dulciora," the Anthony lakefront home, was the setting for the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Ryan L. Wood. A family dinner at the Breakers followed.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an off the shoulder gown of pale blue silk, made with princess lines highlighted by silver stripes. She carried a bouquet of white pompon chrysanthemums and tuberose. Mr. L. Clarke Anthony was best man for his brother.

Mrs. Anthony attended Stevens School at Germantown and is an alumna of Ogontz Junior College. She made her debut in 1945 at a buffet dinner dance given by her parents in their Philadelphia home. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bishop Van Sciver of Philadelphia, and of Harrison I. Potts and the late Mrs. Potts, also of Philadelphia.

Mr. Anthony, whose family were Palm Beach pioneers, prepared at St. Paul's and was graduated in 1949 from the University of Miami. During the second world war he served for three years in the U. S. Navy as a lieutenant (jg). His paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. James

Well known in the colony's young married set are Mr. and Mrs. George W. Clark who have a home on Everglades Island.

Well known in the winter colony is Mr. Charlton Yarnall who is at his home on El Brillo Way. A prominent social and civic leader, Mr. Yarnall passes the summer at Devon, Pa., and North East Harbor, Me.

Rembert Anthony of Washington, Ga. His maternal grandparents are Mr. Louis S. Clarke of Palm Beach and Haverford, Pa., and the late Mrs. Clarke.

The couple went to the Bahamas for their wedding trip, and are now making their home at 224 Royal Palm Way. Mr. Anthony is associated with his father in real estate.

"Casa Rosada del Lago," the lakefront villa of Mrs. Peyton J. Van Rensselaer, was the setting for a cocktail party at which Mrs. Van Rensselaer honored her nephew, Mr. Frank B. Newlin and Mrs. Newlin of Charlottesville, Va., Mrs. Joseph R. Walker, and Mrs. Anne R. Wright of New York.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome D. Gedney, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lester Parsons, Col. and Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, Mr. and Mrs. James A. DePeyster, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis, Col. and Mrs. Parker Tenney, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smoot, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Tilton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Pierson jr., Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Beckwith, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Conlin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Giblin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bissett, Mr. and Mrs. C. Markham Langham and Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Harmon.

Also Mrs. Frederick E. Guest, Mrs. George C. White, Mrs. Leo Francis Ready, Mrs. McAlpin Bell, Mrs. Charles H. Jones, Princess Laura Rospigliosi, Mrs. Jane Obolensky, Mrs. Arthur E. # Tropical Paradise Preserved

ORNITHOLOGIST AND PAINTER of the wild-life he loved, John James Audubon was the inspiration for the society which bears his name, but Warren Bradley, a remarkably dedicated man, in losing his life gained national recognition for the cause of saving tropical birds.

Audubon was already well known for his exquisitely detailed bird paintings before he landed in Florida in 1832. On May 4 of that year the editor of bustling little Key West's only newspaper gave considerable space to expressing the delight of residents in their distinguished visitor. In addition to his strikingly handsome appearance, Audubon possessed great personal charm and intelligence. That he was as enthralled with the Cape Sable-Keys area as were the inhabitants with his visit is obvious from the journal Audubon kept. He wrote in particular detail of the great white heron which he named Ardea Occidentalis. Drawings of this monster among American herons adorn the Everglades National Park commemorative postage stamp.

Since 1905 a lonely grave in the tall grass at Cape Sable has been to pivotal point in the fight to preserve Florida wildlife, or more specifically, the tropical wildlife found only in the Everglades and Florida keys. Succeeding generations of children will actually see regal white herons; frivolous pink flamingoes; virginal snowy egrets and frigate pelicans, or man-o'-war birds, as they are now called, because a game warden, Guy M. Bradley was slain while attempting to arrest suspected poachers.

The National Audubon Society, formed by combining a number of smaller Audubon Societies of spontaneous origins, early began to recognize the need for united action against wanton extermination of rare species in nature, or species of birds and animals with commercially valuable hides or feathers. Most particularly blatant was the slaughter, by the hundreds of thousands, of Florida's snowy egrets and roseate spoonbills. It was only at mating time that the plumage of the snowy egret reached its prime. In New York the demand for prime plumes was tremendous. Gathering the plumes, usually by inhumane means, was big business. Breeding places were located and rifled with almost scientific thoroughness. Not only was Warden Bradley killed, and his murder unpunished, but another Audubon Warden, Columbus G. McLeod was slain, as well. McLeod's death occurred in 1908.

Aroused public opinion led to the signing of the Audubon Plumage Bill in 1910. Charles Evans Hughes, then governor of New York state affixed his signature to the bill outlawing the sale of egret plumes in New York state, and thereby eliminated the biggest market for the feathers. At the same time, the "ladies of the night" in New York city had begun to adopt egret plumes as a mark of elegance. So common was the practice of wearing egret feathers becoming among these demi-monde that respectable women were being accosted, when they wore their plumed headgear on the streets. Thus two widely separated factors, the deaths of two Audubon wardens, and the social slide taken by the feathers, contributed helping hands in stopping the egret feather traffic.

Events over a thousand miles away saved the remaining birds of exotic plumage in Florida's mysterious interior. Feathered creatures horribly hunted in preceding years, learned by some inexplicable grapevine that their rookeries were once again habitable, and began to return from Central and South America, where some of their decimated numbers had sought refuge. Spasmodic pillaging went on for years, as Audubon Wardens were rare, and could not cover all the vast distances, but gradually the state of Florida and the Audubon Society were successful in establishing sanctuaries where the birds could re-establish.

Mrs. Paul Moore and the charming sisters, Mrs. Chester Castle Bolton and Mrs. Dudley S. Blossom, have contributed islands in Lake Worth, now fenced and set apart with signs proclaiming them wildlife sanctuaries under the protection of the State of Florida. On one of these, "Bird Island", an active rookery promises to give Palm Beach the sight of many delightful tropical birds in years to come.

It seems quite a step from the beauty of an egret or roseate spoonbill to the horny hide of an alligator. Actually, the alligator, by killing raccoons, the greatest bird predator, saves more birds and their eggs than any other single factor, now that hunting by man has been largely stopped. The alligator himself has, of late years, faced extinction because of his valuable hide. After milady abandoned egret and spoonbill plumes for her upper attire, she began to look with favor upon alligator hide for her shoes, handbags and luggage. A serious situation was developing, leading toward the total extermination of his toothy lordship, the alligator, when the state of Florida placed a ban on killing alligators in the counties of and surrounding the Everglades. Hide-hunting continued, with the hides sold in northern counties of the state where the ban was not in effect, until the entire state was closed, all year, to alligator hunting. When the past hunting season opened the Fresh Water Game and Fish Commission opened hunting on alligators over eight feet in length, but closed the season again in a matter of days. As a tourist attraction, the alligator is far more valuable on the hoof than his hide could possibly be in a hundred bags.

Mrs. Chester Castle Bolton

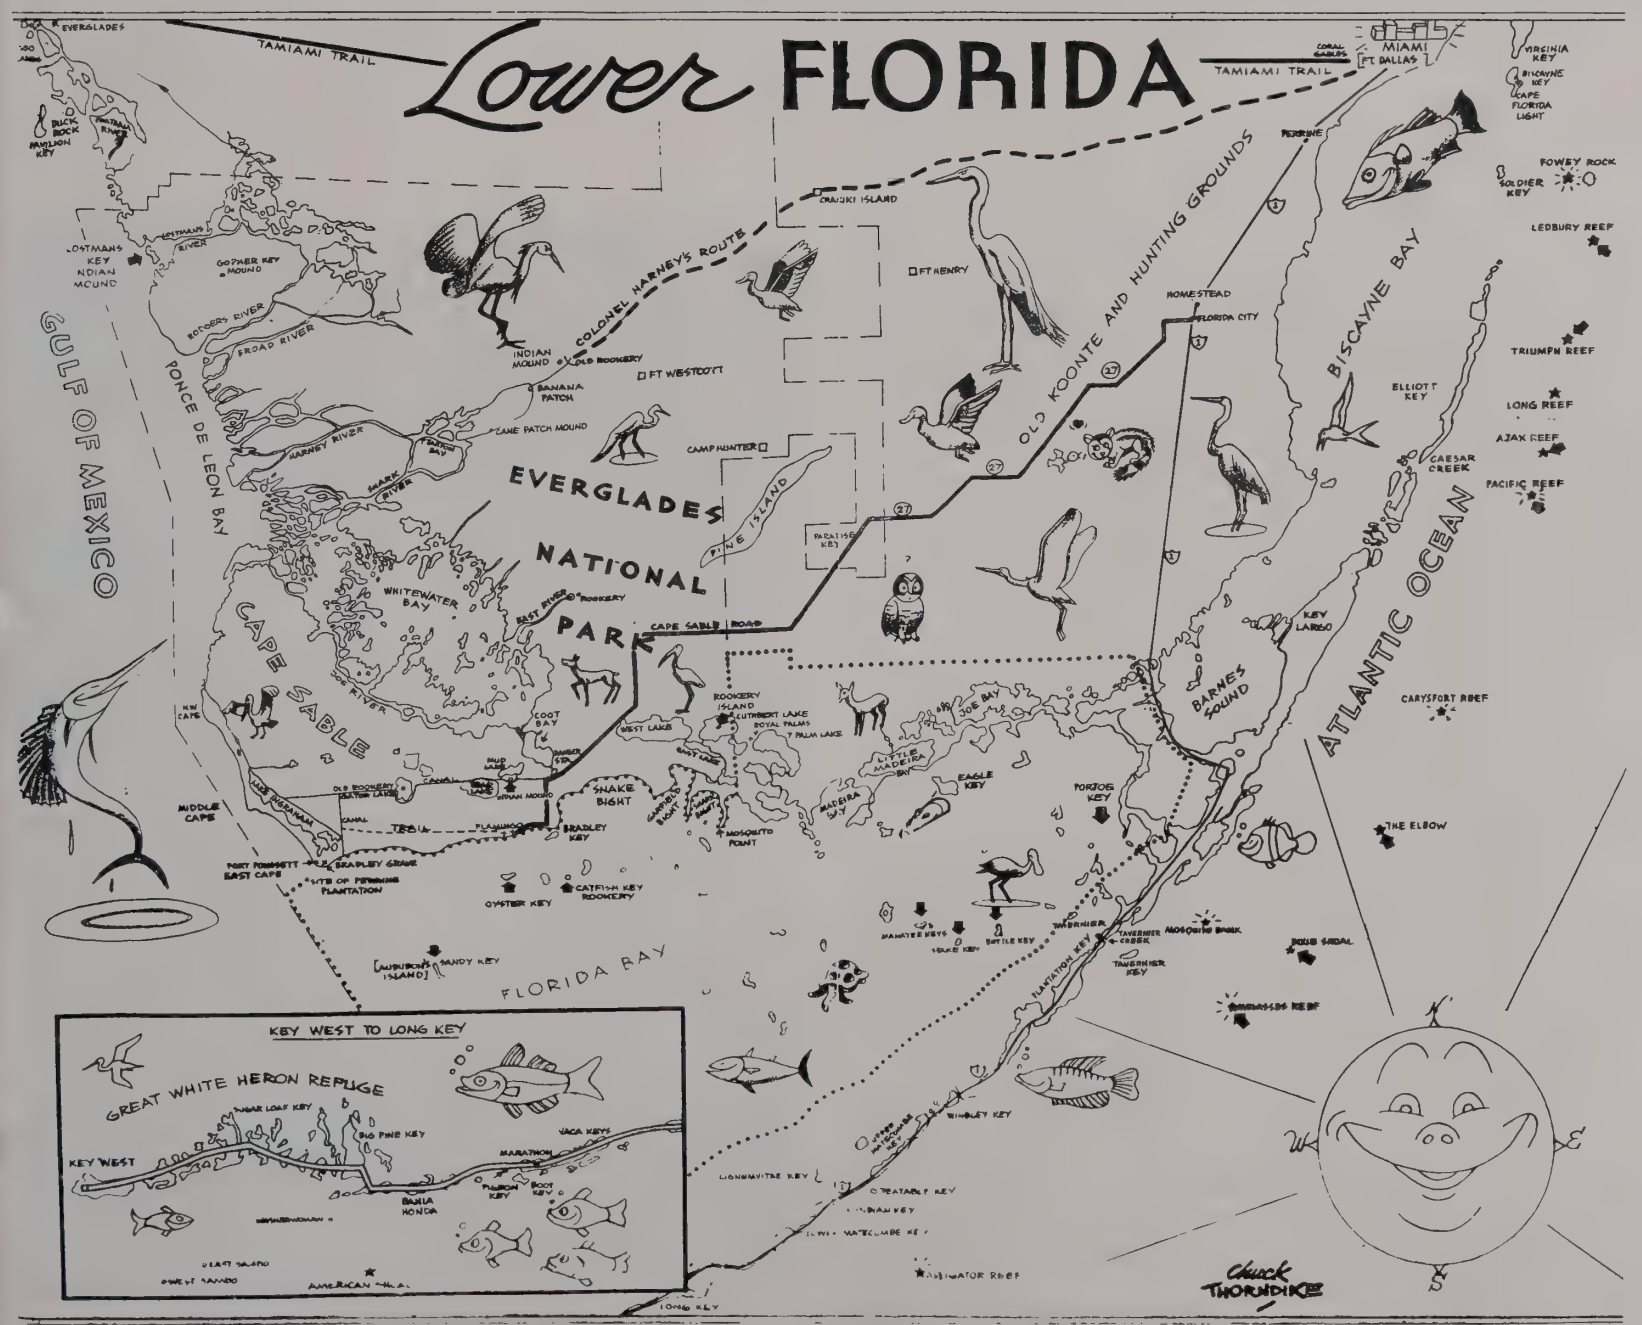

Today the National Audubon Society, the Florida Audubon Society and the Audubon Society of the Everglades, which is the local unit, consisting of Palm Beach and Martin Counties, work tirelessly with state and local legislative and law enforcing bodies to educate the public on the desirability of preserving wildlife. Of major importance is the preservation of the natural habitat where tropical species live and breed. Only under ideal conditions of water and terrain, as well as protection from enemies, can the beautiful birds and the fascinating animals and reptiles of sub-tropical and tropical Florida reproduce their kind.

Although only three years old as an organization, the zealous Audubon Society of the Everglades has succeeded in several important objectives. In 1950 the City of West Palm Beach was declared a wildlife sanctuary, with signs at each entrance to the city proclaiming this fact, and the harming of birds or molesting of nests in the city limits made contrary to law.

Genius of Soutine Reflected at

AN EXHIBITION OF DISTINCTION and aplomb now current at the Society of the Four Arts presents a collection of thirty-four paintings by the celebrated artist, Soutine. It is a lent show with nineteen of the pictures from the circulating exhibitions of the Museum of Modern Art, the other fifteen borrowed from museums, and private collectors. Three of the latter include the Norton Gallery of Art and Mr. Arthur Bradley Campbell and Mr. Leonard C. Hanna, Jr.

Soutine, born in 1894 in Lithuania, was never a very sociable or friendly man. But he was a born painter and in later years he recalled his infant delight in the vari-colored effects of sunlight on the walls beside his bed, even before he was able to talk. At the age of seven, the story goes, he so desired a colored pencil that he stole some utensils from his mother's kitchen in order to swap them off for painting materials, and was punished by incarceration over a two-day period in the family cellar.

Rebellious of his family life—he was the tenth child of a family of eleven, and his father, a poor tailor, wanted him to become a shoemaker—Soutine at the age of 16 set out for Minsk to study painting, and after study at the Fine Arts Academy in Vilna finally through the help of a sympathetic physician got to Paris in 1913.

Here he began to work out his artistic salvation, so Monroe Wheeler tells us in his Museum of Modern Art book on Soutine. Living in dire poverty, it was about this time that he became acquainted with Modigliani, whom he met through Lipchitz, the great and famous Italian painter interceding to bring Soutine's work to the attention of the perceptive and courageous art dealer, Zborowski. Thus it was that Soutine's poor beginning developed into a success story.

By the time he reached 35 the entire art world knew of him and there was a ready market for his paintings. But this held little interest for Soutine. He believed that a painter should stay poor, and whenever he made considerable sums of money took great pleasure in getting rid of it as quickly as he could. Part of this, Mr. Wheeler records, "may have been a real taste for disorder and squalor, but partly it was a mysterious reverence Soutine had for himself, it being part of his make-up to create a series of legends of his personal life, boasting always of his mishaps and hardships."

Quite consistently serious, although his closest friends were Pascin, Modigliani and Utrillo—with Soutine, the artists became known as "painters under a curse," Soutine never forgot he had come to Paris to paint like the masters he idolized. In his early years he talked chiefly of Tintoretto and El Greco, his admiration for Rembrandt developing later, and of course it is generally believed, although Soutine professed not to like Van Gogh, that he profited by acquaintance with that artist's style. He was also acquainted with the German expressionists, knew Chagall well, and "the boldness and extreme colorfulness of the Fauves must not have escaped his attention," says his biographer, Wheeler.

Soutine was an artist of many phases—the most prolific from 1919 to 1922, the theory projected that the death of Modigliani at the height of his career, ruined by dissipation, so greatly alarmed Soutine that he found an outlet for his emotions in accelerated production, and one in which he seemed to be seeking a new style—this being the period of his least legible and hardest to understand paintings.

In 1928 Waldemar George pointed out that the shock of Soutine's painting lay not so much in matter of form, deformation, and malformation as in a certain wildness of rhythm loosed on the canvas, twisting in every lineament of nature and human nature.

"It bends and shakes his figures as though they had St. Vitus dance," he writes, "and harmonious still lifes, flowers, fruits it reduces to rags and tatters. Houses oscillate on their foundations and move ardently hither and thither in the landscape, turning it topsy-turvy as in a series of seismic shocks."

Soutine was invited to come to America in 1940 but elected to remain in Touraine, where he died in 1943 from a severe attack as a result of stomach ulcers which he had suffered from since childhood.

One of the arteries of the vital water system at Bluefield Ranch where clover and Bermuda grasses in lush pastures are helping to produce sturdy breeding and quality beef animals of the Santa Gertrudis strain.

Big Reds of Bluefield

DEEP IN THE HEART OF ST. LUCIE COUNTY, Florida, about 100 miles north of Palm Beach, is the 25,000 acre ranch called "Bluefield." Roughly the size of a township, the rolling acres are owned and operated by Stu Iglehart, a man who usually excels at anything he undertakes.

The ranch, originally consisting of 22,000 acres, was owned during the boom by the St. Lucie Rod and Gun Club, a group of Palm Beachers who had purchased it partly as hunting preserve and partly as investment. It was subsequently sold by John Shepard, Jr., as trustee for the St. Lucie Rod and Gun Club, to Robert H. Sanderson, who makes his home at Chilean Avenue, Palm Beach, for about $50,000.00.

Mr. Sanderson bought the cattle on the place at the time of his purchase. They were standard Florida beef cattle of the thirties, a breed not outstandingly desirable from the standpoint of grower or steak consumer, but quite tasty morsels for ticks and other insects. Mr. Sanderson bought purebred Brahman cattle, and hired the son of the Okeechobee County Agricultural Agent as caretaker and herdsman. The cattle strain began to improve just as the beef situation in general was deteriorating. Rustling, impossible to control in so vast an acreage was one of the reasons for Mr. Sanderson's selling the ranch for the same amount he had paid for it. Good quality beef was selling for around 16c per pound in 1942, and was becoming very scarce.

After purchasing the ranch from Mr. Sanderson, Mr. Iglehart added to the holdings by buying surrounding land. He began immediately to improve pastures, and imported a new breed of cattle entirely. The glamorous Santa Gertrudis breed now interesting Mr. Iglehart is the result of purchases from the King Ranch in Texas, where Robert J. Kleberg, Jr., president of the King Ranch had started in 1920 crossing Brahman bulls with southern shorthorn cows. Selective breeding in Texas produced a red cross-bred bull named "Monkey," an outstanding three-eighth Brahman and five-eighths shorthorn of splendid conformation. Stemming from "Monkey," the Santa Gertrudis breed now fattening on the special grasses of "Bluefield" are heavily boned, have great depth and length of body, and great resistance to southern climate and diseases.

Aiming to develop a breed not only heavy with prime beef, but of desirable appearance as well, Mr. Iglehart's experiments in synthetic protein cattle feed, pastures of clover, soil draining and a system of intercommunicating pens to minimize handling damage, as well as manpower requirements, likewise his progress in the development of the

These heavily boned cattle have depth and length of body so desirable in beef producing Santa Gertrudis breed. Carpet, Para and Napier grasses grow freely in southern Florida, the former is well adapted to moist sand soils, Para is a rank growing leafy perennial, Napier is tall cane-like in growth, it seeds freely and is used for temporary and rotational grazing.

Trees and grazing lands are inseparable in Bluefield and St. Lucie County, Florida. The soil in grassy glades as here pictured, lends itself to the establishment of improved pastures. Areas such as this contribute to shelter for the cattle. On the Bluefield Ranch are many stands of pine, cypress and other woods that provide protection for the game that is plentiful.

This "bunch" of cross-bred cows are herded in one of the intercommunicating sections at the Bluefield Ranch of 25,000 acres where overhead expense of farm labor can be curtailed by concentration.

Santa Gertrudis breed of cattle, are commanding wide attention. There is a very real reason for the insistence on a uniform red color in the herd, though on the surface it would not seem to be important what color the cow's hide turned out to be. When a herd of uniform color and conformation are driven into the buyer's ring at a cattle market, the color alone may add several cents per pound to the price received for the cattle as beef. The wholesale meat buyers are favorably influenced psychologically by a run of thirty or more cattle all the same color, even though exactly the same shade. Now that beef is selling from 25c to 33c per pound, the Santa Gertrudis can command a generous price per pound in lots of a dozen or more. There is no downgrading where the buyer knows the cattleman has spared no trouble or expense to develop an outstanding breed.

The difficulty with Brahman cattle has been that the purchasers of beef didn't consider their conformation good. In overcoming this drawback, but preserving the Brahman vigor, the owner of "Bluefield" is doing all southern cattle growers a service. Recently a Santa Gertrudis Breeders International was formed at Lake Wales, when thirty breeders of the "Big Reds" got together to standardize and demand recognition for their breed. These Florida ranchers, are said to be the owners of 2,000 head of the progeny of "Monkey," and before that members of the hump species believed to have been brought into South Carolina about 1849. Santa Gertrudis is the only breed of cattle ever developed in the United States.

Owners of Santa Gertrudis in Palm Beach County are Mr. Arthur Pancoast and Mr. L. E. Hagen, both of whom have herds located on ranches west of Delray Beach.

The master of "Bluefield" makes his permanent home in Delray Beach, near where his polo ponies are stabled. A ten-goal man, and practically America's "Mr. Polo," he is quoted by a New York columnist as believing that "polo should be enjoyed by the masses." Delray, around the vicinity of the Iglehart residence, might be called the Meadowbrook of the south, as America's finest polo ponies are stabled here during the winter season, and star players of the game in addition to Iglehart, such as Mike Phipps, Laddie Sanford, Juan Rodriguez and, on occasions Pete Bostwick, play here. Although better known for his polo playing, the Chilean-born athlete, Iglehart, is a very serious farmer.

The Iglehart ranch is now more a point of interest because of genetics experiments and pasture improvement projects than in the days when it was a hunting preserve abounding in wild turkey, doves and quail.

Many acres are used at Bluefield for growing leguminous plantings such as beans, peas and alfalfa. These help to improve the mineral content of pasture plants.

Miami Has Versatile Winter Program

Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw of Palm Beach, New York and Oyster Bay, attending the races at Hialeah on Palm Beach Day.

TWO OUTSTANDING EVENTS are scheduled for Miami visitors on Feb. 23, when the $50,000 Widener stakes race, highlight of the Hialeah season, and the opera "Die Fledermaus" take place.

The Widener race will be preceded by a parade of colorful Seminole Indians who will participate in the ceremonies.

Patrice Munsel, Metropolitan Opera starlet makes her Miami debut also on the 23rd, appearing in the opera "Die Fledermaus" in Dade County Auditorium. Taking the baritone lead opposite Miss Munsel will be John Brownlee in the "Bat" role; Eugene Conley, tenor, will fill the part of "Eisenstein."

Tomorrow night (Feb. 13-15) one of the musical high spots of the Miami season occurs, when the Sadler Wells Ballet appears with its 40-piece orchestra at the Dade County Auditorium. The troupe will present, for the first time in Miami, a full length ballet titled "Coppelia." On the 14th they will give the "Nutcracker," "Pineapple Pole," and others followed by "Swan Lake," "The Prospects Before Us," "Beauty and the Beast" and "Facade," February 15. The Ballet is under the direction of Minnett DeValois.

Looking backward to the Palm Beach Handicap a large number of the Palm Beach social set came down on the Biltmore special train to attend the race. Among them was Mrs. Wesson Seyburn, the former Winifred Dodge. Needless to say, her favorite stable is Brookmeade, owned by her sister.

Mrs. Paulding Fosdick, of Palm Beach was a guest recently of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Clark in the Clark's Hialeah club box. Mr. Fosdick, not shown, was also along for the day at the races.

Mrs. Nicholas Schenck, wife of the motion picture executive, pictured here with Mrs. John C. Clark, wife of Hialeah's president, was selected "best dressed lady of the day" for a television show, at the race track recently.

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane. The Seyburns, who have homes in Grosse Pointe and Manchester, Mass., spend their winters at Palm Beach.

Still more musical entertainment is in the offering for visitors, when the Duke University Glee Club appears here Feb. 25 at Dade auditorium.

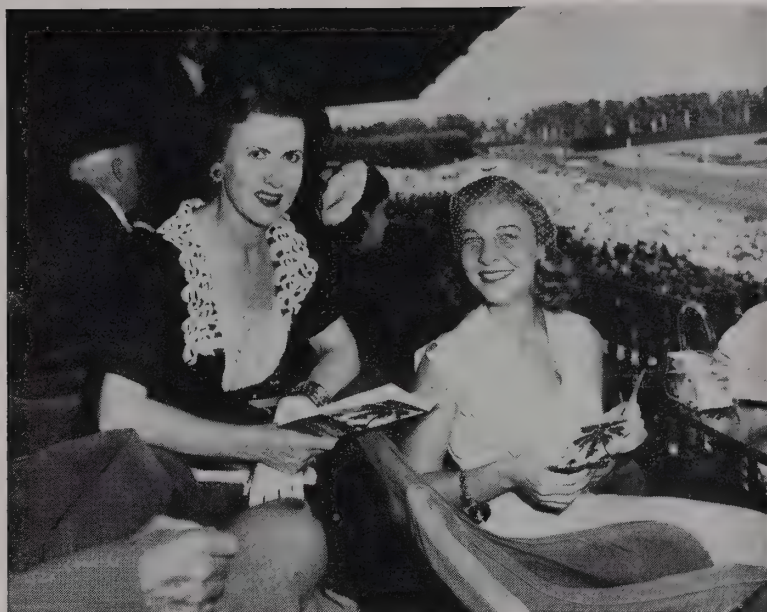

The Miami to Nassau sailing race started Feb. 12 and will be followed by the Midwinter Regatta on the 15 and 16th. These sailing regattas are directed by John Hanafourde.

Seeing old friends here were Mr. and Mrs. John Matheis, Palm Beach winter colonists from New York. Here for a week, they were guests aboard S. A. Lynch's yacht. The Lynch's entertained friends of the Matheis' with a luncheon and races at Hialeah.

Many well known socialites from cosmopolitan Miami attended a cocktail party recently given by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Akers at the Surf Club. Among invited guests were Democratic presidential candidate Senator Estes Kefauver and his wife Nancy. The Kefauvers came with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Katzentine. Mrs. Vincent Impellitteri, wife of New York's mayor, was there with Dr. and Mrs. Cayetano Panettiere.

Col. and Mrs. Carl Raymond Shaw were hosts at a cocktail buffet recently. The hosts' house guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collier, Washington, D. C. were meeting the Shaw's Miami friends, and Col. and Mrs. Stewart Elliott were introducing their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Betts from Simsbury, Conn. Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Betts are sisters.

Yachts both big and small are filling up dock space in Miami boat basins. Seagoing craft serve as living quarters for many visitors. Among returnees this winter are the Raymond A. Markers. Mr. Marker is a New Haven automobile business executive.

Mrs. Robert Wood Johnson, wife of General Johnson, and Miss Virginia Weinman, of Miami Beach, pictured in a Hialeah Club box at the races.

Also due in Miami waters in the near future aboard their yacht are Barbara and Sam Peck. She's the sister of Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney.

The Frank Gannetts, Rochester, N. Y., have recently returned to occupy their winter home here. The Gannetts were hosts recently to a group of Rochester friends at a Bath Club luncheon. Included in the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Scanlon, the William Cruickshanks and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Holderman. The Gannetts are expecting daughter Sally (Mrs. Charles McAdams, Jr.) and her husband for a visit soon. Mr. Gannett is the prominent newspaper publisher.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Ainsworth, Fairfield, Conn., and Palm Beach, were among those who traveled the Palm Beach Biltmore special train to Hialeah on Palm Beach day.

Washington Letter

Dear Dora,

The most discussed visitor in Washington the past few weeks was Prime Minister Churchill. I went up to the Senate Gallery with Mrs. Spessard Holland to hear his address to the joint session of congress. It was a moving occasion as looking and listening to Mr. Churchill made one realize the world still is in as precarious a state as when he addressed Congress eight years ago. Though not in his best voice, he was eloquent and showed his usual mastery of the English language. Looking at him you realize that stature doesn't depend on height.

Despite his 77 years, with his elegant ease and superb humor he is a great favorite with the ladies. At the top-level reception given at Anderson House by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, one of the women guests triumphantly walked off with a cigar he had just laid down. As Mr. Churchill walked toward the head table at a press luncheon he stopped the entire line of dignitaries to lean over and gallantly pick up the fallen napkin of a lovely blonde correspondent. After that the King's First Minister bowed and smiled and resumed his march to the head table.

The British Lion no more wields the power of the past, but Great Britain's Prime Minister certainly has won the hearts of the American people.

Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell who with her late husband were residents of Palm Beach for nearly 20 years at their home "Estrellita" on El Vedado Way, will leave her little gem of a Georgetown house in the Nation's Capital to be traveling most of the winter. Her present plans include a visit to Palm Beach sometime during March. Handsome son, Richard, who spent the holidays in California and got drenched in the worst rain storm since 1938, will be in Palm Beach for his usual visit sometime in February.

Getting settled and ready to take up their place in Washington society are attorney, Meade Patrick and his lovely wife, Claire, who have moved into a large apartment near Georgetown. Mrs. Patrick is the former Claire Foster, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. E. D. Foster of Philadelphia. Their marriage this fall was a social event in Washington.

Authoress and world traveler Mrs. Adam Bruce Fahnestock gave a delightful cocktail party at the Sulgrave Club to welcome back her chic, blonde daughter-in-law, Mrs. Betty Fahnestock, the former Mrs. Frank Vanderlip. Betty divides her time between Washington and the Virgin Islands which is her official residence.

What is beauty? A committee of the new "Black Tie" organization, a dance group in Washington, took it upon themselves to choose the 12 most attractive matrons in Washington society. The smart little local magazine, "Diplomat," came up with the assertion that to be a successful hostess or a well-dressed woman, doesn't necessarily make the woman a beauty. So the controversy goes on, and the "Diplomat" since has published a list of their own.

Those chosen by the Black Tie group were: Mrs. William R. Hearst, Jr., Mrs. John R. De Sibour, Senora Julio Heurtematte, Mrs. Eugene Caruse, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Blake Clark, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. George C. McGhee, Mme. Thor Thors, Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Mrs. Robert Olds, and Mrs. Robert F. Moran.

Mrs. Truxton Beale, chatelaine of Decatur House, the historic old home of Stephan Decatur on Lafayette Square, is perhaps Washington's most famous hostess of the dignified, old-school type. Her parties are never large and her guests carefully selected. She is one of the famous "three Bs" who are well known the world over as representative Americans, the other two are Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Mrs. Beale who has been the recipient of many decorations became an honorary citizen of Venice recently which was a reward for her help in the raising of funds in 1948 for the repairing of the Basilica of St. Mark. Her outstanding charitable work in Washington was when she served as honorary chairman of the Piccadilly Arcade in April, 1941. From this one three-day sale $25,000 was raised for British War Relief.

From New York comes the word that it won't be long before Mrs. Margaret Thompson Biddle, former wife of General Ike's right-hand man in France, Colonel Tony Biddle, will soon remarry.

The ex-Mrs. Biddle who has been living in one of the most stunning houses in Paris is now back in New York. If reports are true she will soon wed Navy Comdr. Tommy Thomas, long time favorite in the capital. His late father was our last Ambassador to Czarist Russia.

When Washington loses one of its few favorite bachelors it is a minor catastrophe. This was the case during the holidays when the charming Ambassador and accomplished pianist "Mike" Elizalde who has been the Philippine Ambassador for some years, left for Manila to assume his duties as Foreign Minister. His successor will be the well known Carlos Romulo.

Highlighting Washington's entertaining was the dinner given at the handsome Ecuadorian Embassy by the Ambassador and Senora de Penaherrera in honor of much-feted visitors from Rome, Prince Fabrizio Colonna and Princess Jeanne Colonna, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Perkins also of the Italian capital.

There were 84 guests in all including friends from Washington and Rome. Diplomatic, official, congressional and residential circles were represented. Dinner was served at tables for 10 and protocol and personages were well distributed. Princess Colonna, Mrs. Perkins and Senora de Penaherrera are sisters.

Newest Newport property and house owners are Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dewey of Washington, whose residence here with its subtle blending of English and French antiques, is one of Georgetown's gems. Mr. Dewey and his beautiful wife have just purchased Easterly, the former Roger Firestone Rhode Island headquarters.

The Deweys will probably go up in either May or June and return to Washington in October. Easterly is situated on Gibbs avenue with about an acre of ground. Chic Felicia Fisk Dewey will furnish it with some of her family pieces and other French and English antiques.

Arriving in Washington recently to be the Dewey's feted house guest was Mrs. Clark McIlwaine who herself recently did over her Newport house, Ivy Tower. Newport is fast becoming a popular year-round paradise and Mrs. McIlwaine reports that the holiday season was especially gay. On Mrs. McIlwaine's slate, among many others, was the luncheon given by Mrs. Edward H. Foley, Jr., and the dinner hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Reed.

Having a happy reunion with Washington in January were Mr. and Mrs. Giovanni Bagarotti. The well known violinist and his talented pianist wife who visited Palm Beach last year were here for a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Belin.

Being highly hailed by critics is Mr. Bagarotti's newest music program. It consists of playing nine Mozart concertos at three different performances during the winter at Carnegie Hall. Mrs. Bagarotti, the former Martha Rousseau, is the daughter of Theodore Rousseau, retired banker of Paris.

Sailing the end of January aboard the Liberte for The Hague were Selden Chapin, U. S. Ambassador to The Netherlands, and his delightful wife. However, Washington friends expect to greet them again in April. They will be checking in a day ahead of Her Majesty Queen Juliana who with Prince Bernhard will arrive for a colorful state visit. The youthful ruler and her prince consort will be the first official guests of President and Mrs. Truman at the remodeled White House.

Crown Prince Ahmed Fuad who was born in Cairo amidst much rejoicing on January 16. I hear that Queen Narriman who has produced the heir to the throne in the land of the Nile may have a new name conferred upon her by the King. The name will probably begin with F as do all the names of the members of the royal family.

Evelyn Kem, daughter of United States Senator James Preston Kem and Mrs. Kem, was married Saturday, February 2, to John Everett Knapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Everett Knapp of Kankakee, Illinois, in St. John's Protestant Episcopal church. The Reverend C. Leslie Glenn, D. D., performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Sulgrave Club.

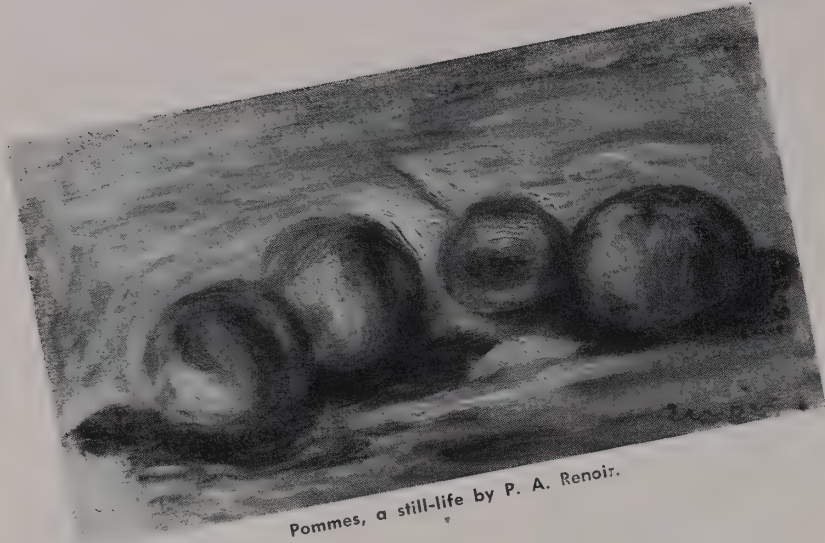

Evelyn, wearing a gown of candlelight duchesse satin cut along princess lines, and a veil of lace bordered with heirloom lace, was given in marriage by her father.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Virginius Randolph Shackleford, Jr., of Orange, Virginia, as her matron of honor. Other attendants were: Marion Knapp of Chicago, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. George Cooke, 3rd, of Towson, Md.; Mrs. Walter H. Hart, Jr., of Perrysburg, Ohio; Mrs. Thomas J. Nolan, of Alpine, N. J.; and Miss Mary Bonney Williams, of Columbus, Ohio. All were attired in ballerina length bouffant gowns of emerald green satin with matching bandeaux, and carrying sheaves of calla lilies.

Well, darling, excuse me, I find myself late for the colorful reception given at the Luxembourg Legation in honor of the Grand Duchess' birthday. Love till I see you, sincerely,

GARNETT.

French Show at Worth Avenue Gallery

Landscape With Church by Jean Eve.

Nice: Le Carnaval aux Ponchettes, by Paul Signac (1863-1935).

La Gardeuse d' Oies by Camille Pissarro (1830-1903).

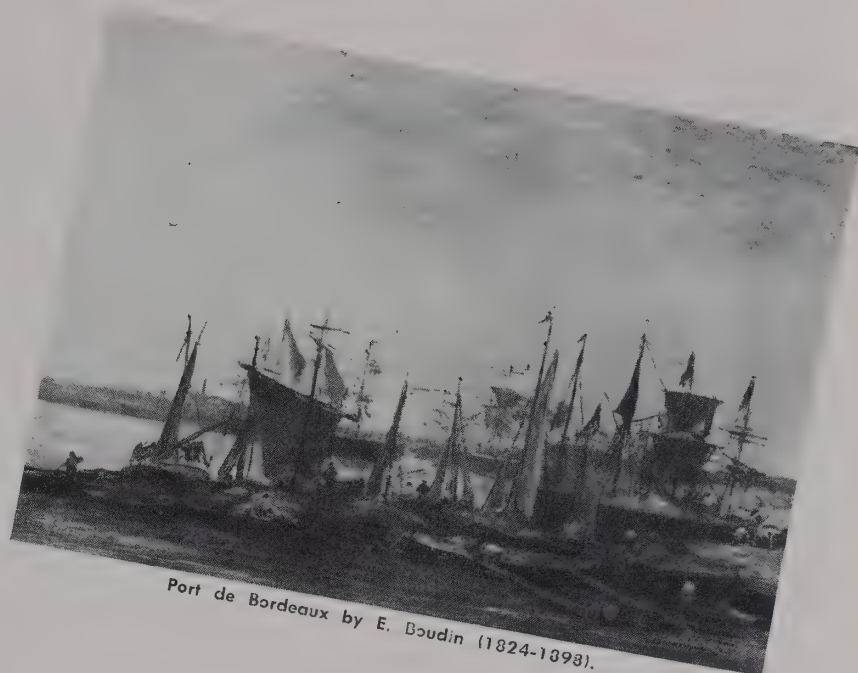

THE LOVE AND TASTE FOR COLOR reflected in the work of the French Impressionists and Post-Impressionists is comprising a sparkling exhibition just now at the Worth Avenue Gallery in a notable collection that spans a hundred years—the paintings lent by M. Knoedler and Company.

Continuing a tradition set by Directors of the gallery, Mrs. Duggett Benson and Mrs. Archibald Rayner a few years back, to present each Palm Beach season, a notable French exhibition, the array which gallery goers may now find hung in distinctive style, will leave no doubt in the minds of art lovers, and connoisseurs that impressionism brought with it an enrichment of the means available for painting.

Among the artists represented are most of the great names of French painting of the last hundred years—Boudin, Pissarro, Renoir, Morisot, Cassatt, Signac, Forain, Vuillard, Bonnard, and Lautrec. Probably the earliest picture in the group is a watercolor by Boudin, done in 1866—one of his most sought after beach scenes, probably of the Channel port of Honfleur, with fashionable ladies of the era and their families on the sands. The other Boudin is an oil of the harbor of Bordeaux, painted in 1874, showing small cargo boats flying the flags of many countries including the Stars and Stripes. This is a particularly sparkling example of a series which have become famous, and one of which hangs in the Louvre.

The two Pissarros will be for many, the high points of the show, for they rank with the best pictures ever painted by this great artist whose landscapes of town and country picture a France which will never change. The earlier of the two is a typical rural scene of a peasant girl with flock of geese, painted in 1875, and is one of Pissarro's most famous pictures. The later one was painted in the year of his death, 1903, and it is almost as if the artist were summing up all his love for Paris in this one picture. It is an autumn scene of the Quai Malaquais—and although there is a touch of sadness in it, the well remembered view of one of his favorite Paris haunts has the nostalgic quality of something which one loves and to which one is saying a gentle good-bye.

Another charming painting of Paris is "Patinage" by Berthe Morisot, whose brother-in-law was Manet. This is a sketch for a larger painting done in 1895, the year of her death. It appears that the Paris winter that year was an especially cold one, and all the little lakes in the Bois de Boulogne were the settings for gay skating parties.

Port de Bordeaux by E. Boudin (1824-1893).

Bowl of Flowers by E. Vuillard.

La Route aux environs de Clamart by Henri Matisse.

Renoir is represented by a small early landscape of superb quality, and by a later delicious still life of peaches.

Also an exquisite painting is Bonnard's "Boule de Neiges,"—fragile white flowers which remind one of Japanese gardens, and which Bonnard paints with the delicacy and flatness of design, as in a Japanese print.

In addition, there also are drawings and watercolors. Particularly delightful is a sharp little drawing of a coachman by Toulouse-Lautrec, whose sense of humor bursts from the lines on the paper. There are also works by more modern painters—for instance, the great contemporary master Chagall, whose vividly colorful painting will remain long in one's memory, and Dufy, and Matisse, and Utrillo, whose very names call to mind the color and charm of France.

Entrance of the J. Stockton Bryan home on Lake Way. The epitome of modernity, this exotic house is built of Tennessee stone. Byron F. Simonson was the architect. Worrell's did the decorating.

The tropical patio, which is as colorful as the interior, features tinted wrought iron furniture, upholstered in multi-colored sailcloth. Enclosed by part of the house and glamorized with foliage.

J. Stockton Bryan House Definitely Individual

All photos by Jan Hankowski

"Down to the sea in ships" . . . via the ceiling-to-floor window, which gives an unobstructed view of tropical splendor! The blonde mahogany furniture and chartreuse curtains are effective contrast.

Indoor-outdoor loggia, one of the most charming rooms in the house and an attractive entrance to the modern abode. Wonderful vistas, inside and out . . . and an ideal place to relax, or to dine.

INDIVIDUALLY MODERN . . . the J. Stockton Bryan house on North Lake Way! Built of Tennessee crab orchard stone and varnished cypress, featuring numerous ceiling-to-floor windows, it is one of the show places of Palm Beach. The "picture windows" affording a wonderful vista of Lake Worth and enhancing the colorful modern decor.

The loggia provides a charming tropical setting for lunching, dining, reading or lounging. It comprises both patio and loggia and is a smart entrance to the inside of the house. The wings of the house enclose this section, making it virtually a roof and windows.

Furnished in wrought iron, painted turquoise and upholstered in yellow, green, turquoise and chartreuse sailcloth, it echoes the colorful decor of the entire house. A number of rattan pieces offer interesting contrast.

Blonde mahogany furnishings for the spacious dining-living room, are an interesting complement to the plum walls, turquoise rugs and shocking pink satin chairs. The ceiling-to-floor windows that overlook the lake, are the type that slide into the floor . . . giving an unobstructed view and plenty of breeze on warm days and nights. The remaining windows in this fabulous room, are of the louvre classification . . . also as attractive as they are functional.

Glass curtains of chartreuse spun glass, enhance the setting and allow the sun's rays to penetrate and shed a soft glow over the fascinating setting. Sectional pieces which have the advantage of a "change of scene" without much effort, are done in subdued grey tones. The love seats are plum, matching the walls and the smart chairs are shocking pink.

For the "recreational grouping," the card table and chairs of the effective blonde wood, help to "tie the room together" in the upholstering, which repeats all of the tones used in the room. The spinet of blonde mahogany, lending dignity and charm to the most important room in the home! Featured in an important spot in the decorative scheme and adding character to the smart furnishings, the noted head "Smiles," done by a contemporary sculptor, Hugo Robus, whose work is on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

The study, which "looks into the patio" through full-length windows, is paneled in blonde mahogany, harmonizing with the furniture. It is a "workable looking" room, as well as most attractive! The built-in desks and wardrobes for convenience and the blue walls, chartreuse couches, beige rug, blue and beige upholstering of the chairs and sectional pieces, giving tone and color to the decorative plan.

The three bedrooms are equally interesting and colorful. The one on the first floor has a striking wall treatment . . . the paper on one side is charcoal and the others, grey-textured, with touches of red. The chartreuse rug is an effective background for the chartreuse and black-checked taffeta curtains and bedspread.

On the second floor, one bedroom has pale turquoise walls, chartreuse rug, equestrian-printed curtains, brown headboard and bedspread. Mrs. Bryan's bedroom has black wallpaper printed with pale pink and yellow hibiscus, a pale green rug, ice-green curtains of spun glass, white bedspread and a number of lucite chairs and tables. One entire wall is made up of clothes closets.

Byron Simonson was the architect who designed the Bryan house; Worrell's planned and executed the interior decorating.

Interior and exterior are a smart harmony in design and color themes . . . the former complementing the outdoor architecture in effective blending of over-all plan and minute detail. Resulting in an ideal interpretation of contemporary modern!

An interesting corner of the living room, which combines plum, turquoise, shocking pink and chartreuse in the exotic color theme. The furnishings are as individual and unique as the gay color merger. Note fascinating glass table and lamp variety.

Looking into the patio from a corner of the spacious living room . . . both interior and exterior, an interesting "color picture." The full-length windows, slide into the floor, adding space to the room and extra breezes in warm weather.

A cozy conversational corner! And a magnificent "picture window." In the distance, the Bryan boat "Leeway" anchored at their private dock . . . convenient when they suddenly decide to take a pleasure cruise on the inland waterway.

Golf in January Spotlight

THREE THINGS STOOD OUT in the Palm Beach sports picture during the month of January. They were putting at the Everglades Club, the Lake Worth Championship and the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests tournaments at the Palm Beach Golf Club.

The putters are amazing everyone—even themselves—by the way they are turning out for weekly Wednesday tournaments on the beautiful new green in front of the enlarged terrace of the Everglades Club. One week, 68 men and women came out, breaking the record of 66 contestants set last year. Then the following week 69 turned out and a new record was established. The putting committee is wondering where it all will end.

One thing that is making it easier to conduct larger putting tournaments is the fact that the new green is much larger than the old one, making it possible for more to compete at the same time.

While the number of players record was being increased by one, the course record was being lowered. John J. Van Gonsic went around the 18 holes in 33, knocking one stroke off the previous low. And Mrs. Hal C. Rich at the same time was tying the women's best mark—a 34, made earlier in the season by Mrs. Edith Hasler. The hole-in-one winner for the month of January was Herbert Farrell, Jr., who marked up eight during the month's five tournaments.

W. A. (Dub) Pagan won the 46th annual Lake Worth Championship, oldest golf event in this part of the state. He started with a low medal round of two-under-par 68 and then romped through four opponents to gain the title he had failed to get in 1951 when Robert Sweeny defeated him on the final day. This time he didn't have the former British Amateur champion to contend with, for Sweeny was knocked out of competition by youthful Jack Waddell, of Lake Worth, in the second round. Sweeny had eliminated former winner Reginald Boardman, Jr., in the opening round.

Pagan beat John B. Smith, Virginia Beach, Va., in the first round, 5 and 4. Then he took Myron Friedman, Maplewood, N. J., into camp, 3 and 2. Next came young Waddell, 6 and 4, and in the finals William Markham, East Hampton, Conn., fell by 3 and 2 in a test slated for 36 holes.

Boardman won consolation honors; James Paul, the 1947 winner, from Daytona Beach, copped the second flight, and the third flight was won by Ike Merrill, also of Daytona.

Albert Drake, a member of the Old Guard Society of Palm Beach Golfers, won the Advertisers tournament. He defeated S. R. Schulhofer, New York, 1 up, in the finals. Walter B. Pedersen, the defending champion, was ousted in the semi-finals by Schulhofer. It was a handicap tournament, with Pedersen and Paul Cushman sharing medalist honors with two-over-par 72s.

In the women's section of the Advertisers golf, a 72-hole medal handicap tournament, Miss Mary Griffin came out on top the final day with a net 71 that gave her a four-round score of 314. She had 20 strokes handicap. Miss Griffin finished 10 strokes ahead of Mrs. F. Fehlhaber, a 13-stroke handicapper.

Putting contests at the Everglades Club have grown by leaps and bounds since they were first started four years ago. In a recent weekly tournament on Wednesday 68 contestants broke the all-time record.

Grouped here are a few scenes from that day's record field. Starting at the top, left, and going clockwise: A view across the beautiful green to the new enlarged terrace. Mrs. K. Trousdell, Mrs. Raymond S. Farr and Mrs. W. R. Jackson take their putting very seriously. George B. Graff (center) gave his ball all the body english he could, but it just grazed past No. 4 hole. BEHIND THE SCENES: At Koslow's, where you may view the gorgeous jewel designing, in the making. An amazing experience! Among their fabulous creations, a double-strand necklace, fashioned of nineteen matched emerald-cut diamonds, bordered by baguettes.

HANDS ARE AN INDEX TO CHARACTER: Say the experts and a good way to keep them "socially acceptable" . . . the Empress Josephine hand lotion, which is concocted in the Palm Beaches by the way.

SELF-WINDING WATCH: An amazing new wristwatch at Milton Fuller's . . . the "Eterna-magic," the first and only watch in the world, to wind itself on a ball-bearing. On exhibition in the store, an oversized model of the watch in plastic, to let you know "what makes it tick."

FOR DINING AND DANCING: The Mme. Mogabgab salon, pioneer in the resort, has been noted for years, for superlative evening clothes. This season's collection, representing the tops in American designing, includes dazzling clothes, in both the short and conventional long stylings.

QUAINTLY SMART: The white organdy evening dresses by Traina-Norell, fashioned of imported fabric, with voluminous skirt and fitted basque bodice with balloon sleeves. For color and dash . . . bright red wool mess jacket with double row of brass buttons.

COLLECTION OF SEVRES: Among the rare and interesting items at "Treasures and Trifles," a pair of Sevres lamps with silk shades, fashioned of old jardineres and mounted on high standards; a lovely old Sevres jewel cabinet, dated 1755; Sevres glass box in cobalt blue decorated with ormolu, cleverly shaped.

CEYLON SAPPHIRES: Are the medium for a striking jeweled ensemble by Marcus Inc. . . . bracelet of these smart stones, bordered with round diamonds; 30-carat ring; pendant earrings which are perfect affinities for the short coiffure and strapless evening gowns. Also outstanding, a fabulous diamond necklace, which breaks down into two bracelets.

WOODS FROM THE WORLD: The Manor Industries, has custom-made furniture styled of woods from . . . the Belgian Congo, Australian walnut, satinwood from Africa, rosewood from Honduras, South American primavera, East Indian rosewood, Japanese ash (tamo), American cherry, teakwood from Java and Sumatra.

"GLITTER STUFF": One of the most fabulous collection of diamonds and other precious jewels at Harry Winston's, New York. They also feature "famous historical diamonds of the world" in their noted "Adventures in Winstonland." Dramatic, is the word for their own modern interpretations.

IT'S SMART TO KNIT YOUR OWN: Sweaters, stoles, dresses, socks! Fascinating yarns in an extensive variety of types and colors and instructions in knitting, if you need them; at the Evelyn Curtis shop, in the Via Parigi. Knitted garments are also made to order if you haven't time to do the job.

"Tradewind", a smart and casual coiffure, designed by Bernard of Elizabeth Arden, especially for Palm Beach. Note the upswept lines, softness of styling and youthful effect. Equally style-right for daytime and evening.

A SOPHIE ORIGINAL, styled of peau de soie, in a full gored skirt and fitted bodice with "portrait" neckline and short sleeves . . . white ground and grey flower motifs in a border pattern. Grey velvet bows add a touch of dash. From the spring and resort collection of Saks Fifth Avenue.

A SYMPHONY IN GREY, ideal for dancing under the Palm Beach moon and stars! A Sophie Original from the resort and spring collection at Saks Fifth Avenue. Tones of grey nylon net, shading from the palest hue to smoke... the idea echoed in the sequin leaf decorative motifs. Note the long fitted net sleeves and deep V plunging neckline.

FASHIONED OF PALM BEACH CLOTH, this smart Sacony suit from the resort collection at Anthony's. Numerous new styles are available and you can "match or mix" the skirts and jackets, for clever color combinations. Note the chic detail of this four-button tailleur; trim neckline, interesting pockets, slim skirt.

A NATIVE "TIE-DYE" PRINT, styled in a sheath, effectively draped, with strapless bodice, featuring the built-in-bra . . . matching stole for cover-up occasions. Available at Herman's. Photographed at the old Martelle Towers, used in the Spanish-American war and now an art gallery in Key West, Fla.

The Directoire influence is reflected in this very feminine costume by Tina Lesor, from the resort collection at Finchley's. Sky blue is the color and the fabric is silk shantung. White-lace puffs enhance the bodice styling. A grand Palm Beach dress!

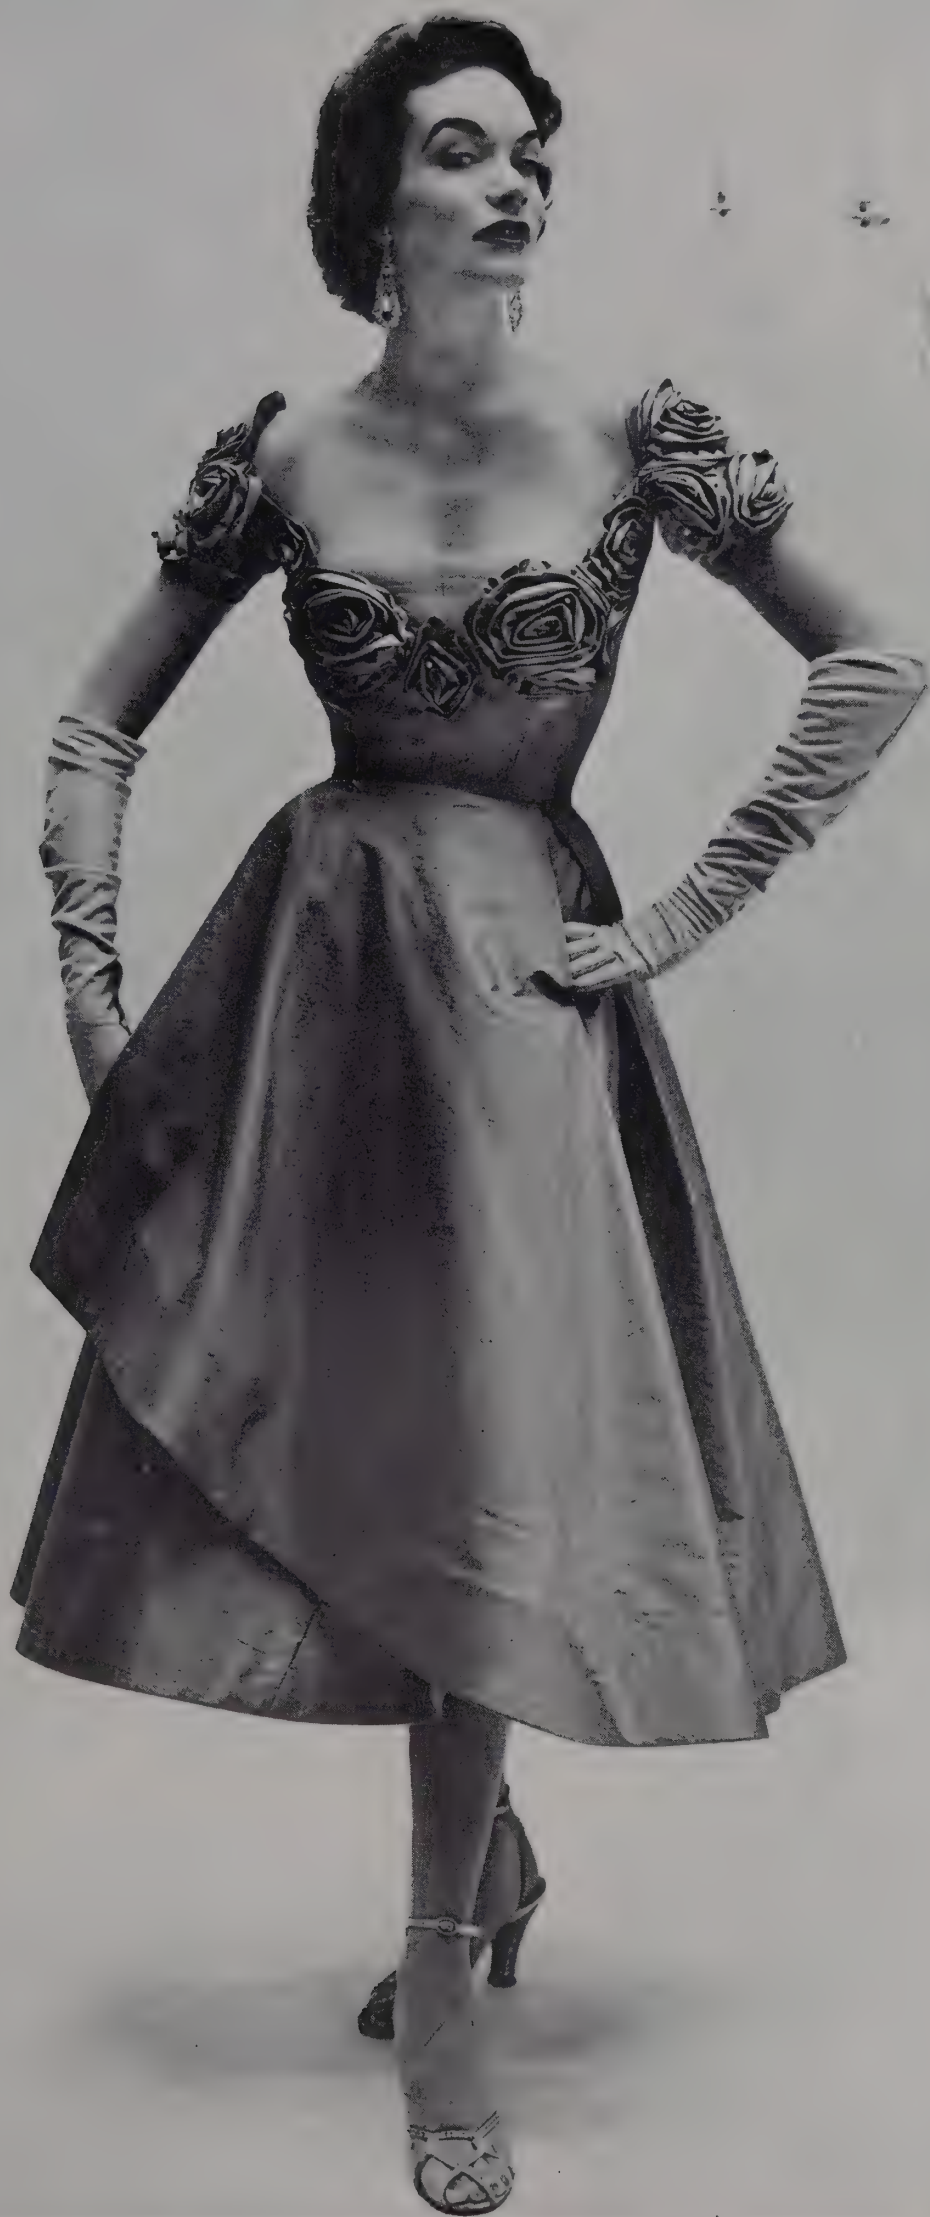

A magnificent collection of Cartier's diamonds, featuring marquise, pear-shaped, baguette and round-cut stones, in fabulous designs for the glittering pieces... each individual. The hair clips are especially interesting and versatile. The pear-shaped drops in necklace and earrings, enhance the striking styling.

A brilliant collection of diamonds from L. Rap'ou Brockov . . . necklace of baguettes and pear-shaped stones, inspired by an old French piece. Pear-shaped diamonds and pearl pendants, dramatizing the pin; swirls of baguettes and pear-shapes for the bracelet; eight-carat ring; diamond leaf earrings of baguettes, accented with pear-shaped stones.

GOLD ANTIQUE TAFFETA, was the medium for this fascinating evening dress designed by Philip Hulitar. The flattering bodice bordered with crushed folds of the glistening fabric, "studded" with gold sequins, is an outstanding style note. Also, the smart draped skirt of the popular short length.

New York Letter

Dear Dora,

Despite sleet and snow, the activities of New York society continue to be as gay as ever. At a very elegant dinner the other night I met the Marquis and Marchioness of Blandford who had just returned from Palm Beach where they divided their time between the island estate of Lord Blandford's grandmother, Mme. Louis Jacques Balsan, and the lavish ocean front villa of his great-uncle, Harold Vanderbilt. The son of the Duke of Marlborough and his lovely young bride were here for only a few days before sailing on the Queen Elizabeth for England, but they reported they couldn't have had a better time. Lord Blandford, as you recall, was formerly the constant escort of Princess Margaret Rose, and he is the perfect example of young British manhood. He and his wife, who is equally attractive, make a divine couple, and were a welcome addition, if only temporary, to New York circles.

I ran into Jose Dorelis the other night at El Morocco where he introduced me to his bride, the former Peggy Deegan. Peggy originally comes from Philadelphia, but recently has been making headway in the films and on TV. I had heard she was engaged to a wealthy Texas oil man, but what women can resist the continental charm of Jose. After all, didn't glamorous Dolly O'Brien give film star Clarke Gable the cold shoulder in preference to the warmer one of Jose. The grapevine has it that Dolly couldn't have been more pleased with the marriage of her former spouse. Her comment was "Wonderful, but no money, how sad!"

And speaking of Clarke Gable, one hears that Sylvia, with whom he is still bickering over a financial agreement before divorce matters can be fully settled, is romancing with young and attractive Stuart Symington, aide to the governor of the Bahamas. How nice for Sylvia, as she has always shown great interest in Englishmen. Stuart, I am told, is a mere youth of twenty-odd, and of course we all know the former Lady Stanley of Alderley is no debutante and has been around quite a long time. Why, when I was just beginning to go about, I remember reading of Sylvia's escapades with the late Doug Fairbanks. Their romance was recorded by the press as vividly as the later one of Ali Khan and Rita Hayworth. But anyway, the gal's got glamour, no mistake about that.

What do you hear of Sylvia's former beau, Woolie Donohue? Someone told me they saw him at Palm Beach being most attentive to lovely Irene McEvoy, Charles Wrightsman's daughter. Do you suppose there could be anything serious there? I'm certain, however, Papa Wrightsman would put his foot down should Irene decide to marry Woolie.

I was saddened to hear that Millicent Huddleston Rogers is so very ill doctors have given her only a short time to live.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wendell Gardner are shown following their wedding at Sharon, Conn. The former Joan Aylsworth Landon and her husband were photographed with her mother, Mrs. Finney Landon and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner. The senior Mr. and Mrs. Gardner are from Washington, D. C. and Watch Hill, R. I. They have a winter home here on South Ocean Boulevard.

An attractive foursome from Philadelphia make a charming picture as they stop at the Stork Club for evening refreshment. They are Mr. and Mrs. George V. Smith, left, of 730 Arlington Road, Penn Valley, Narberth, Pennsylvania, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Francis Clement, Jr. (formerly Irene T. Greif) of 260 Booth Lane, Haverford, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Smith is the former Elizabeth W. Huber.

Millicent is in Mexico and her sons, Peter Salm, and Arturo and Paul Ramos have flown down to be with her.

Mickey Jelke, one of the three sons of John F. Jelke, who always seem to hit the gossip columns, is now romancing with Sandra Ward, a former cover girl. As a matter of fact, Micky gave Sandra a lovely jewelled watch which she wears constantly. I heard only the other day that the Frank Delaneys are agreeing to disagree. Mrs. Delaney, you know, is the mother of former glamour girl Virginia Leigh.

My dear, I last wrote you that Ludlow Stevens was positively livid about reports that he either was, or was about to be married. He declared to all interested persons that he absolutely would remain a bachelor. On February 4 at St. Bartholomew's Ludlow and Kim Kendall, of England were married. I wouldn't be at all surprised if they head for Palm Beach on their honeymoon. Did you know that Barbara Hut-ton recently donated $100,000 to the Victims of Floods in Italy?

Tucky French Astor and Beverly Bogert jr. are a two-some these days. I read Beverly's very stuffy parents have taken Tony Pulitzer's Palm Beach villa while Tony hies himself to Spain for two months. It seems Spain is the chic place to go these days, and you know as well as I that Tony would never do anything that wasn't considered chic. The Henry Buhls are also among those who will be present at Madrid this season. I'm certain they will be greatly missed at Palm Beach where they entertained so lavishly.

Joan Fontaine and Ali Khan are to meet in early February in Punta del Este, Uruguay. They had planned a secret rendezvous, far from the eyes of the public, but a few intimates, in whom they had confided, spread the word far and wide, and now anybody who even pretends to be in the know, is aware of Ali's mysterious romantic rendezvous with the glamorous film star.

Rocky Cooper has sent word to her lanky screen actor Gary that anytime he wants a divorce he may have one for the asking. But so far Gary has made no move to obtain a severance.

A refugee from Palm Beach told me over cocktails at the Stork that Herbert Farrell jr. of the Maxwell House Coffee fortune and Mrs. John T. Dorrance of Campbell soups are romancing. Now on the surface this would seem the ideal match. Two huge fortunes uniting to form an even stronger alliance against those awful men in Washington. I'm sure all the young girls of marriagable age in Palm Beach are simply livid at this report. Herbert is a man in his prime, with plenty of money, social position and background. And Ethel Dorrance is in the same bracket, financially and socially. There is however, a small matter of age, but perhaps in this case it doesn't matter. Nevertheless, friends say it's so, and Herbert and Ethel are reported being seen everywhere together. As a matter of fact, Herbert's mother, Mrs. Farrell, has put her stamp of approval on the whole thing. Everyone says it's the funniest thing that's happened in years. You probably know that Mrs. Farrell broke up Herbert's romances with Edith Hasler and Jane Obolensky, two lovely, and reasonably young ladies.

Well Dora, my news is running out. Hope to see you before the season closes.

Love,

ELLEN.

Floating Homes on Lake Worth

A DAY OR TWO OF STORMY WEATHER afflicted the land of perpetual sunshine, and skippers of the nautical beauties at local docks were kept busy putting out extra lines, securing everything loose on deck, and hoping it would quiet down a bit. The bigger yachts were very little affected, as the peppy little wavelets only made them slip lightly against their moorings.

Entertaining on board their seagoing homes; at local docks, and in the open sea continued unabated, as winter colonists used their yachts to give their landlubber friends a wonderful treat.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Preble Motley, whose "Whalebird" is docked at the Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club dock, have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dingley, who arrived aboard their "Snafu II" two weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Matthes and nautical minded canine, Fritz, are at the Useppa Island Club, Useppa Island, on the west coast of Florida, on board their yacht "Ouananiche."

Mr. and Mrs. Porter B. Chase are also on the west coast, where they have been cruising in their yacht "Electra."

Mr. and Mrs. James Norris, whose Canadian registry "Oceola" is berthed at the foot of Australian Avenue, are planning to entertain guests on a cruise in the islands about the middle of February.

The Harold Vanderbilts' large, graceful "Versatile" has been out of its dock for a few days, but flying the blue flag indicating "owner not aboard." The Vanderbilts and guests often visit the yacht while it is in dock.

Also on the west side of the lake, the "Glen-Mar," belonging to Glenn L. Martin, of aircraft fame, is awaiting Mr. and Mrs. Martin, who are expected momentarily from their home in Baltimore. Mr. Martin established the first aircraft factory in the United States in 1909.

Henry O. Rea and stepson, George Frick, are still catching and releasing sailfish at a furious clip. The two go out very nearly every day on board the "Linwood."

Also in pursuit of the finny tribe the Lamot du Ponts' "Willit" has been carrying owners and guests fishing lately, and the smartest sailfish are finding themselves challenged vigorously.

The R. A. O'Connor's "We Go" is cruising in the islands, with serious fisherman O'Connor pursuing his favorite sport.

From the Brazilian Avenue dock also the "Car-al II," owned by the Allen A. Johnsons, is cruising and fishing from Marathon to Key West.

Mr. and Mrs. George Scher, who are staying at the Breakers, have been doing some fishing lately from the decks of their "Wilma D."

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Kerr, Jr., whose "Gailew" is registered out of Spring Lake, N. J., are doing quite a bit of fishing, as are Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Stone, of York, Pa., owners of the "Sir Pal."

On a recent day at the Brazilian Avenue dock, Claude D. Reese, descendant of pioneer Palm Beach developers, gunned the motors of his "Cracker Boy," startling a flock of jackdaws into wild flight around the dockhouse, and out over the "Wild Goose III," belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Thompson. The "Wild Goose III" was at that moment sedately proceeding south on Lake Worth, bound for Bahia Mar, Fort Lauderdale.

Yachting guests who have taken houses ashore for the season are: Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Fay, owners of the "Mouse," who have rented a house on Angler Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Allison F. Fleitas, who had been living aboard their "Vael," and have taken a house close to its berth, and Mrs. Fred Schneider, of Bethesda, Md., owner of the "Rosalie I," who is living at 146 Root Trail.

Mr. S.A. Lynch, owner of the Columbus Hotel, Miami, is spending a few days at the Palm Beach Biltmore, while his yacht the "North Star" is berthed at the Biltmore dock.

Other interesting yachts at the Biltmore are the "Silver Dawn," with Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Edgecomb spending a few weeks on board, and the "Jennie III," whose owner, Louis A. Wehle, is spending the season in Palm Beach and using the "Jennie III" for short pleasure trips.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed West, of Richmond, Va., are house guests on board the dreamboat "Sea Horse" and will accompany owners Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hughes on a cruise to Miami for the races at Hialeah. Mrs. Hughes was recently co-hostess, with Mrs. Scott Smith, a season guest at the Gulfstream Hotel, to guests, making a table each of bridge, canasta and samba, on board the "Sea Horse." The card players had been entertained at luncheon at the Brazilian Court by Mrs. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Pratt have chartered the Frank M. Smiths' "Thelmar" for six weeks and have been entertaining guests with short cruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Scholtz, of Washington, D. C., cruised to Miami with guests Commander and Mrs. Pell Miller, of Washington, and Commander and Mrs. John L. Rutherford, Palm Beach cottage colonists, aboard the "Good Hope."

Mrs. Daniel Braham, of Victoria, Texas, arrived in her yacht "Paranda" just a few days ahead of her brother, Mr. Dennis O'Connor, in his "Cascabelle." The "Paranda" was extensively written up in the Show Number of a yachting publication last month.

There are quite a number of midwesterners enjoying Palm Beach from the decks of their yachts this season. Mr. LeRoy Murphy, owner of the "Bar Nothing," is from Springfield, Ill. Mr. Murphy is entertaining his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, for several weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Graham, of Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, are cruising in the keys as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice B. Frank, also from Chicago, on board the Franks' "Maureen C." Mr. and Mrs. George Altoffer, of Chicago, where Mr. Altoffer is president of the Santa Fe Grain Elevator Company, have also been recent cruise guests of the Franks.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Coons, Chicago and Fort Lauderdale, have purchased a new 51-foot Chris-Craft named "On Time." Mr. Coons is chairman of the board of General Finance Corporation.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rosensteil are expected to join their yacht "Holiday" at Walker Key for cruising and fishing.

Mr. W. R. Ritter arrived from Huntington, W. Va., a few days ago and, with Mrs. Ritter, who came down earlier, is cruising on board their "Chickybill."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chipman, on board their "Bar-Bette IV," have joined the local yachting colony contingent of the west coast of Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Heermann, owners of the "Clare H," have returned from Philadelphia, where they stayed at the Barkley, Rittenhouse Square. They will soon be joined by their son, Robert Shore Heermann, and expect to cruise south to the keys.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Manning, whose "Sea Phantom" is a regular at the Palm Beach Yacht Club dock, are entertaining extensively for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Connley, of Connecticut, who are spending a few weeks in the Palm Beaches.

"The Lark," belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Kroehler, is cruising in the keys with Mr. Kroehler's brother, Mr. Kenneth Kroehler, aboard.

The yacht "Betsy Chatham" is expected momentarily at the Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club dock with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Felts, who will spend several weeks in the Palm Beaches.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice B. Frank, of Chicago, and daughters Marilyn and Maurine Catherine, enjoy a cruise on Lake Worth on the Frank's yacht, "Maureen C. II".

Par Avion from Paris

FOR AMERICANS IN PARIS, the highlight of the winter is the Roosevelt Birthday Ball. This year, because of the presence of the U.N. it was necessary to engage the city's largest ballroom—the grand salon of the Palais d'Orsay which accommodates a thousand people. This elaborately frescoed building overlooking the Seine and facing the Louvre is a popular place for a party because of its accessibility.

Arranged under the patronage of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the fourth annual ball was especially festive. Invited to stand beside her in the receiving line were the American Ambassador and Mrs. Bruce, and the Hon. and Mrs. Paul R. Porter. Mrs. Perle Mesta was asked to come from Luxembourg and the guest list starred with Ambassadors and Ministers, and high officers from SHAPE.

Prizes were typically French—cases of champagne. Sevres and Lalique vases, a round trip by air between Paris and Nice, gowns and perfumes from the couture, a course in any foreign language (including Russian), and a tiny automobile. The five million francs realized from the ball will aid French victims of polio.

* * *

All during February it is the great dressmaking houses which keep Paris going at a smart clip. Presentations of the new Spring and Summer collections began on the morning of February 1, at Jacques Heim. First showings are ostensibly for the press, but a select number of socialite clients, writers, painters and people-about-Paris are always invited.

They squeeze uncomfortably into the crowded salons and sip champagne with the fashion scribblers, and prefer it to seeing the collections in more comfort at a later date. The late Gertrude Stein was a guest of honor at the unveiling of Pierre Balmain's first collection; one always sees Alice B. Toklas there. One may see Princess Troubetskoy at Fath's, and Madame Auriol, the president's daughter-in-law, at Dior's. Michele Morgan is always an attraction.

This year, nine houses—Worth, Jean Desses, Jeanne Lanvin, Marcel Rochas, Germaine Lecomte, Edouard Seyne, Raphael, Hubert de Givenchy, and Jeanne Lafaurie—are showing their collections at night. One of the most impressive of these evening shows is staged in the house of Desses, which has a private court, a grand staircase and a salon overlooking the Avenue Matignon and the little etoile of the Rond-Point. And, if one peers a bit, there is the Tour Eiffel. The house was built by Gustave Eiffel, the French engineer who designed the Eiffel Tower. A few years ago Mr. Desses redid it as a maison de la couture, but kept it looking like a private house. Like all the dressmaking houses, it has just been completely refreshed for the midwinter collections.

Too bad this doesn't show more of what Michele Morgan is wearing; she's conceded to be one of the best-dressed beauties of Paris. With her at the opening of "Barbe-Blue" was actor Henri Vidal.

Colorful JAMAICA ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

FOLLOWING A YEAR which saw a new high record of arrivals in this tropical island, the Jamaicans are assured of a winter season that will break all previous records, judging from the number of firm bookings and advance reservations which are already in hand.

Smart visitors made their reservations for January and April, when the hotels and guest houses will be less crowded, although the additional accommodations that have been provided by the erection of new hotels and extensions of space in other ones will ensure that every visitor can be accommodated, even if he arrives in February or March. While he cannot always be sure of getting space in the hotel or guest house he prefers, he will be taken care of somehow, somewhere on the island.

Jamaica boasts that it has "five resort areas, all different, and all on one island," which gives it a distinction from those areas which have their resorts situated on different islands of the same geographical group. You get off your airplane or ship at Kingston or Montego Bay and without leaving the island you can visit five enchanting resort spots, ranging from beach areas to lofty mountain hideaways situated at anywhere from 2,000 to 3,700 feet—and if you want to go higher you can ride on a dependable burro to the top of Blue Mountain Peak, 7,402 feet above the blue-green Caribbean Sea, where you are monarch of all you survey, like stout Cortez on that peak in Darien.

Also in Jamaica the traveler will find many historical points of interest, which category does not include the Knutsford Park Race Track, where pari-mutuel racing is enjoyed at frequent race meets during the season. You will also see polo matches, cricket games, soccer, and other British sports, most of which are interrupted at 4 o'clock for the traditional British tea and crumpets.

From Kingston you can take intriguing mountain drives over the surrounding Blue Mountain range and possibly you will stay at a guest house 2,000 or 3,000 feet above Kingston if you are so minded.

If you land at Montego Bay, or drive over from Kingston, you will find this internationally famous beach resort as smart and as alluring as ever—in fact, more so, because new hotels have been built and others have been refurbished for the season.

Along the north coast in the Ocho Rios-Tower Isle area there are also new hostelryes and improvements and extensions in old ones. In the mountain district, in Mandeville, at 2,000-3,000 feet, you find the atmosphere and amenities of a typical English village, with an old-world charm.

At Port Antonio, on the northeast coast of Jamaica, the visitor finds the most brilliant tropical vegetation in the world, according to botanists who know. Adjacent to Port Antonio is San San Bay, a secluded residential area which is attracting new residents every season and is said to be one of the most beautiful spots on the entire island. "The Blue Lagoon," between Port Antonio and San San Bay, has long been a Mecca for artists and photographers.

This year Jamaica will provide at least 300 more beds for visitors, with the total being increased to 3,100 per night.

The new Upton Country Club will open the first nine holes of its projected 18-hole golf course in January. It is situated about five miles from Ocho Rios and the same distance from Tower Isle. The hotels along the north shore will send their guests over in station wagons every morning and return them in the afternoon.

The "Nuevo Dominicano" of the Eastern Shipping Corporation is doubling its service from Miami to Kingston, sailing every fortnight since January 7. Three ships of the Alcoa SS Company sail on regular schedules, leaving New Orleans every Friday, while cruise ships of seven trans-Atlantic lines will call at Kingston and/or Montego Bay during the season, accepting one-way passengers when space permits.

The Jamaica Government Railway has entered into the spirit of things by putting Diesel trains on its route from Kingston to Port Antonio, and is expected to Dieselize the route to Montego Bay as soon as additional equipment arrives from England. The new trains are not only cleaner, more comfortable and higher-powered than the old steam locomotive-driven trains but they cut the running time, saving 50 minutes between Kingston and Port Antonio and 2½ hours on the road to Montego Bay. They take the steep Jamaica mountainous grades without a helper locomotive and they round turns more safely at higher speeds because of their low center of gravity.

One thing the islanders can't improve is their climate. Readings range between 74 and 78 degrees at sea level during the winter and a little higher in Kingston, whereas in the mountain resorts 68 to 75 degrees are the usual extremes. The sun shines every day and it is said that rain, when it does occur, comes only at night, by special arrangement with the Tourist Board!

When you visit Kingston, the island's colorful cosmopolitan capital, you will enjoy shopping for smart British imports of sportswear, woolens, doeskins, linens, tweeds, polo coats, sweaters, gloves, scarves, beach wear, luggage, glassware, French perfumes and, of course, the Jamaica rum.

As for sports, there are four golf courses. Tennis courts are superlative in Jamaica, where the turf is compared with that at Wimbledon and Forest Hills. There are no "18-hole" tennis courts on this island!

Water sports are naturally at their best on a tropical island. They include beach and pool bathing, deepsea and river fishing, sailing in pert little sloops and catboats, motor launches for picnics and fishing, spear-fishing and undersea exploration, and water-skiing, as well as viewing the submarine flora and fauna through glass-bottomed boats.

Also there is river-rafting, gliding down gentle rapids on a bamboo raft, a sport in which Errol Flynn takes a deep interest and he is not unlikely to wave to you as you put off shore on your raft. He offers a cup for the river rafting races that are held every year near Port Antonio on the Rio Grande.

Col. Henry R. Crown, of Chicago, who was one of the buyers of the Empire State Building in New York City recently, accompanied by Mrs. Crown has been visiting Tower Isle Hotel, Jamaica, B. W. I. Mr. Crown is one of the largest stockholders in the Hilton Hotels Corporation as well as in the new company which owns the Empire State Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hastings, of 26 Academy Avenue, Pittsburgh, were recent visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Westby, of Berwyn, Ill., enjoyed a January visit.

Among winter season visitors are Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hamilton, Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, Canada.

Prominent among recent visitors to Tower Isle Hotel, on the north coast of Jamaica, B. W. I., was Eva Gabor, vivacious star of television and the movies, whose television show is a featured Thursday program of the American Broadcasting Company network. Miss Gabor is a native of Hungary.

Col. and Mrs. Robert G. Storey, of Dallas, Texas, are visiting on the north coast of Jamaica, B. W. I. Colonel Storey is dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School and heads his own law firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Berlin, of New York, will enjoy a winter visit to Tower Isle during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Beckley, of New York, are visiting Jamaica, B. W. I. Mr. Beckley is vice president of Merritt-Chapman-Scott Corporation and vice president and managing director of Merritt-Chapman-Lindsay Corporation, of New York.

Mr. Paul Lazarus, executive vice president of Columbia Pictures, New York, and Mrs. Lazarus are vacationing here.

Howard Greer, noted Hollywood dress designer, who recently completed the costumes for a new film, "His Type of Woman," in which Jane Russell is starred, and who is author of the book "Designing Male," is visiting on the north coast of Jamaica.

AMONG the PALMS

THE BREAKERS has capacity bookings through the season and a number of old-timers who have been coming here for years are among those registered. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond N. Felter, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Peterson, of Evanston, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stone, of Toronto, Ontario, will remain throughout the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill C. Meigs, of Chicago, returned for their annual season. Mr. Meigs is vice president of the Hearst Corporation. They have spent many seasons at The Breakers.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson, of New York, have taken a suite for their usual sojourn. Mr. Watson is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the International Business Machines Corporation. Their son, Thomas J. Watson, Jr., is president of IBM.

Here until April, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Harrison, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. William Dewey Loucks, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Glenn Hale, Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. Georgia Lee Parker and Mrs. Faith Cole, New York;

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Brennan, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. R. G. Buchold, West Newton, Mass.; Mrs. John P. Connolly, Merion, Pa., and Mr. W. P. Davidson, St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Forster Abeel, of Forsgate Farms, Jamesburg, N. J., are here for several weeks and will have guests during their stay, including Mr. and Mrs. William K. Hepburn, of Jamesburg.

Staying until March are Mrs. William Barnes, Jr., Decatur, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer K. Bolton, Wilmington, Del.; Dr. and Mrs. C. M. A. Stine, Wilmington; both families spend their summers at the Mountain View, Whitefield, N. H. Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Miller, New York; Mr. Harry B. Nassoit, New York; Mr. and Mrs. John Quinn, Jr., West-erly, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Storz, Omaha, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene K. Denton, New York; Mrs. Russell Leonard, Brookline, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Carpenter, Jr., Omaha; Mr. and Mrs. Patrick H. Smith, New York; Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Vann Gaasbeek, Kingston, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Spence, with Mrs. L. A. Cushman, New York; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Gillett-Hill, Lincoln, Ill.; Mrs. William H. Fenn, Wilmington, Del.; Mr. W. H. Lyons, Thomaston, Conn.; Mr. Carl G. Bingham, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Thrall, Rye, N. Y., and Mrs. John G. Walsh, Providence, R. I., remain until mid-March.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Turnure and Master Tommy Turnure, of New York, flew down for their second visit this season. They remain until March 20. Also Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ingle, of Rochester, N. Y. They made an extensive trip through several European countries and the British Isles during the summer and autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Walter, of Uxbridge, Mass., have returned for their usual season. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Brooks, of New York, will be here for six weeks on their annual sojourn.

The Vineta

The Vineta has taken on a mid-season atmosphere of gaiety, life and color, with many of the "regulars" returning for their tenth and even twelfth seasons. George G. Ulmer, jr., of Minneapolis, is at the hotel for his ninth season. This year he is accompanied by his father and mother, and his sister, Mrs. Eugenie Ulmer LaMothe of Minneapolis.

Francis Smiley of New York City is at the Vineta for his tenth season, his fifteenth consecutive season in Palm Beach. Hugo Schmidt of New Rochelle is there for his twelfth season. His son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schmidt of New Rochelle have joined him for a winter vacation here.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry O'Neal entertained recently for Mrs. Arnold Kirkeby, sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Kirkeby, jr., who motored up from the Kenilworth at Bay Harbor, Miami, to spend the day. The ladies attended the Tombola luncheon at the Everglades Club while Mr. O'Neal and Mrs. Kirkeby luncheoned at the Vineta.

Mrs. Harold Richardson proudly displays the two silver trophies received in swimming and golf contests, at the old Breakers during the 1901-1902 season, when she was stopping at the hotel with her mother. She was then Miss Marion Ogden. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are at The Breakers for the season this year and she is still active as a swimmer . . . taking her daily dips, regardless of the weather. They are members of the Breakers Cabana Club.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Whitaker of New York City have returned to the Vineta for their annual winter sojourn. They will remain until March 15 when they will go to Nassau.

The Rev. William I. Ferry of Providence, R. I. is making a return visit to the Vineta, accompanied by Father William Drury, also of Providence. Dr. and Mrs. James P. McCaffery, also from Providence, are vacationing here.

Visitors from all parts of the country at the Vineta for several weeks include: Mr. and Mrs. Percival E. Foerderer of Bryn Mawr, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Lamb of Cleveland Heights, R. G. Fell of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Stephenson of Garden City, L. I., Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Russell of New York City, Mrs. Sara S. Fletcher of Portland, Maine, Miss Elizabeth Trapier of Ardsley, N. Y., Mrs. George H. Wilson of Chicago, Mrs. Lillian Milot of Providence, Mrs. Thomas Wayland of New York City, Miss Janet C. McAdie of Brooklyn, Miss Julia Carpenter of Boston, Dr. and Mrs. James P. Deane of Madison, Wisconsin.

Ambassador Hotel

Parties, formal and informal... cocktail get-togethers, and luncheon, and dinner affairs, with old friends arriving day after day back in the resort, meeting and talking over travels of last summer, basking in the sunshine on a white, sandy, broad beach is a thumb-nail sketch of life at the Ambassador Hotel of Palm Beach.

More visibly surrounded by water than any other hotel along the East Coast, the Ambassador rising up seven stories affording spacious apartments and penthouses in its superior accommodations to patrons from the North, is situated in one of the most picturesque parts of the island of Palm Beach where the ocean strand narrows so that it is but a hop and skip from the shores of Lake Worth to the rolling surf of the Atlantic.

In new beauty of decor brought this year to the Ambassador and landscaping improvements, guests returning for their annual stay find the estate-apartment-and-residence hotel, the Ambassador with a splendid new dining salon, the Embassy Room; its intimate little bar refurbished in smart, subtle colors; a new patio for lunching and late evening parties called the Embassy Terrace and adjoining the main dining room; and a wealth of tropical planting about the spacious grounds, together with a broad and right now popular putting green looking westward over Lake Worth.

The Ambassador boasts no game preserve or polo field on its estate. But within easy reach with three limousines at the disposal of its guests there are five golf courses, three tennis clubs, fishing fleets, polo, horse and dog racing, and of course famous Worth Avenue is but ten minutes by car from the Ambassador.

With accent on unexcelled food prepared in the best French and American manner, the Ambassador is proud to have as its maitre d'hotel this season, Frederick, formerly of London, Paris and New York.

And pleasing Palm Beach audiences both at the Embassy Room and Terrace, and over the air three nights weekly is Norman Wallace, singing piano jester brought to the Ambassador for his initial appearance on the Palm Beach scene by Mr. Larry Borsten, managing director again this season at the hotel.

With a style to please cosmopolites, young Wallace who sings French songs and ballads with an American accent came to the Ambassador after successful appearances in New York, Montreal, and Chicago where he was held over by popular request at the Buttery of the Ambassador West Hotel.

A composer and arranger of catchy tunes, Wallace, a graduate of Northwestern University and the Goodman Theatre in Chicago has been playing the piano for years. But only since he was stationed in Paris during War II has he accented the French in his repertoire.

At the Ambassador are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Collins of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Allen and Mr. James Scully of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Levy of Highland Park, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. S. Smiley of Reading, Pa.; Mrs. Louis Hartman from Haverhill, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gordon from Winnetka, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cummings of Montreal, Canada; Mr. and Mrs. S. # PALM BEACH HOTEL

ONE OF THE "SECRETS" of the Palm Beach Hotel's success over the years, this season included, is rather an open one. Indeed, anyone may find it out simply by taking a tour of the spacious-but-intimate gathering places in and about this delightful hostelry.

Hop into our afromobile, then, and we'll take this little tour right now. Ah, that's it: left toward the lake from North County Road, and midway down Sunrise Avenue. See the haughty royal palms? Proud of their charge, they guard it jealously from the searching eyes of the passers-by. But now they part, revealing the gleaming pinks and whites of the Palm Beach Hotel's center facade.

Two lofty-bell-towers overlook the Spanish mission edifice; the white wrought iron balconies, the red tile eaves, the white twisting arabesque molding, all set off against sunset pink stucco.

We alight under the maize-and-white canopy and enter the building, but not before darting delighted side glances

This lounge lies beyond the dining room and parallel to it. Lined by high, arched windows draped in gay patterns, it is dominated by a mural in white and tones of green covering the entire 50-foot-wide by 20-foot-high rear wall and depicting abstract classic Greek architectural and sculptural figures from Samothrace and the Acropolis.

Let's go back through the dining room and into the Cocktail Lounge. See how the mood changes! From light tones to deep, lush green on the walls, imparting a quiet intimacy rather than a light one. White wrought iron furniture and columns in the same color offer a bold contrast to the tropic green. A wall-to-wall, floor-to-ceiling, squared-off mirror stands behind the gracefully curving bar. The lights are indirect and subdued.

Just outside, the West Patio beckons us. Entertainment center of the Hotel, this open-air club features a roomy, raised-terrazzo dance floor in front of a covered podium, all surrounded by white tables and chairs. Foliage and cocodown the cloister-like, vaulted arcades formed by long rows of bougainvillea-draped white columns and pink walls.

Once inside, our first steps fall on the green-and-white carpeting of the light, airily-decorated lobby that immediately creates an "Enjoy yourself" atmosphere. The pale aquamarine of the walls are set off by four white plaster bas-reliefs portraying Neptune, Maia, Diana the Huntress, and Pan, each apparently pleasure bent: spear wielding Neptune gazing down wall toward our Goddess of Spring, up to her knees in jasmine, and Pan throwing a leer from horseback toward Diana's greyhound-protected corner. Fish-tail palms spread their feathery branches to add to the light, airy effect.

This light-heartedness is maintained in the dining room, once given designations like "Coral Palm" and other verbal embellishments, but now allowed to go by its legal nomenclature of "Main Dining Room" and to let its viewers exercise their own adjectives. The fish-tail palms are repeated, and small vines hang from white cornucopia light brackets clinging to the double row of columns. Pink appears once again, this time on the wall panels, surrounded by white molding and perimeters of grey.

It is a very high, long room, brightened during the day by natural light streaming through myriad small, glass-covered squares in the ceiling. This ceiling, by the way, is beamed in pecky cypress, a beige-colored, pock-like-marked wood that also supports the lobby and lounge overhead.

nut palms, illuminated at night by colored floodlights, complete the picture.

We dash back through the Cocktail Lounge, past the sparkling, cream-colored coffee shop, past the card room with its wall-covering murals of kings, queens, and jacks, through the upper lobby, and then tip-toe into the most enchanting public room of all: the loggia.

Scene of gay cocktail parties and after-dinner musical interludes, it probably is this spot, more than any other in the Hotel, that revives among the guests memories of the elegance, intimacy, and charm synonymous with a vacation at the Palm Beach Hotel.

Remember those bougainvillea-shrouded columns we saw upon first entering the building? We find them along one entire side of the loggia, forming a wall of leaves and flowers. Pink wrought iron, turquoise-cushioned settees, love-seats, and chaise-lounges, all nestling in the orange glow of lamps in white, wrought iron candelabras, cream-colored columns and walls, and fish-tail palms combine to give the coolest, most hushed effect imaginable. It is the kind of room in which, except during the brightly-illuminated cocktail parties, one must speak in whispers or feel out of place.

There is a back garden, too, and the Cabana Club. But perhaps we'll see these another time. Right now, it's back to the afromobile after an excursion into one of the most delightful spots in all of delightful Palm Beach!

International Eucharistic Congress

Keynotes Peace

THE 35TH INTERNATIONAL EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS which convenes in Barcelona, Spain in May, promises to be the most important Congress since the first inspiring assembly in Lille, France in 1881. This is the first post-war Congress to be held and in talking over the plans with the three men in charge of the tremendous affair, at The Breakers where they were on a short winter holiday, they said, "Peace" will be the keynote throughout the six-day conference.

"We will join with thousands of representatives from the free world, for special devotions and colorful ceremonies, culminating in the dramatic Eucharistic Procession," said Ray McCarthy, who is president of the Catholic Travel League.

Twelve cardinals and twenty-six hundred bishops will attend, with Their Eminences Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York City and Samuel Cardinal Stritch of Chicago, as leaders of the American group. Other noted clergy to take part in the Congress . . . the Most Rev. Archbishops John J. Mitty, San Francisco; Thomas E. Molloy, Brooklyn; the Most Rev. Bishops Edmund F. Gibbons and William A. Scully of Albany; John F. Noll and Leo A. Pursley, Fort Wayne.

The Most Rev. Gregory Modrego, Bishop of Barcelona, will have charge of the ceremonies in Spain. John F. Gehan, executive vice-president of the American Export Lines and Mr. McCarthy went to Spain last October to "survey the situation" and to talk with Bishop Modrego and Bishop Segura of Seville, about the tremendous undertaking. "The Spanish people are very enthusiastic about the Congress and thousands of them will take an active part in the event" they commented.

The S.S. Constitution and the S.S. Independence, 25,000-ton ships of the American Export Lines, will make the pilgrimage, Mr. Gehan said. "They are air-conditioned, swift and ultra-modern. Each steamship carrying a crew of 600, for the approximately one thousand passengers.

"The six thousand Americans expected to attend the Eucharistic Congress, will use these ships as hotels," Mr. Gehan noted, "augmented by rooms in homes, within a radius of one hundred miles of Barcelona." In co-operation with the American Export Lines, other ships to take part in transporting the thousands of pilgrims, will be . . . the Queen Mary, Britannic and Queen Elizabeth.

Aside from the importance of the Eucharistic Congress, the itinerary itself will be tremendously interesting . . .

featuring stops at a number of Mediterranean ports. There will be shore trips at Lisbon and the Shrine of Fatima, the Azores, Genoa, Cannes, Naples, Gibraltar, Cadiz for a visit in Seville, Naples for four glorious days in Rome. Numerous "side trips" are also available for passengers desiring to visit various countries, including one to Haifa, for persons desiring to see the "Holy Land."

Besides the thousands of Americans attending the Congress and pilgrims from Spain, there will be visitors from Ireland, Scotland, England, France, Italy and Switzerland. This important phase of the extensive Congress plans will be ably handled by Ralph T. Reed, president of the American Express Company, as well as the multitudinous other travel details and he said he had them completely and thoroughly "mapped out." Whether you have traveled abroad extensively or belong to the "one trip" contingent, you realize and appreciate what a wonderful help and mentor this organization can be!

Going back into the history of the International Eucharistic Congress, Mr. McCarthy stated that the "first and only one held in the United States, was in Chicago in 1926, in which His Eminence, the late Cardinal Mundelein, was host. The American Congress and the one held in Ireland in 1932, were the largest to date, but the Congress to be held in Barcelona, Spain this year, from May 27 to June 6, is expected to far surpass all of them . . . both as to the great number of persons attending and the significance of the ceremonies. It will be among the outstanding world events of 1952."

Prominent Personages on Biltmore-Hialeah Train

WHILE AFTER SUNSET HOURS provide a variety of amusing and interesting things to do, going to Hialeah for a day via the de luxe Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel-Hialeah race track train, continues to dominate sun-filled days on this tropical isle.

Prominent figures in the turf, financial and social worlds of the nation are favoring this luxurious mode of travel to sun-splashed Hialeah. The Paulding Fosdicks entertained in the club car section of the Hialeah "race special" for Robert Goelet, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin and Chester Dale.

Canasta fans noted whiling away the time en route to Hialeah in the club car included Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brokaw, Mrs. Frederick Owsley, Mrs. John Dorrance and Herbert Farrell Jr.

Turf fans from the "Nutmeg" state making their first trip to glittering Hialeah included Fred T. Bedford, "oil magnate," and Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Ainsworth of Fairfield accompanied by Gordon Taylor of Toronto, Canada.

Col. and Mrs. Edward Pardee Johnston took along their house guests Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Warren of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania to view the "sport of kings."

Mr. William M. Holmes took along as his guests, Mr. and Mrs. William A. White, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tellier, Mr. and Mrs. George Ferris, Mrs. Theodore Stemmler and the Rev.

The Biltmore's "race special" sponsored by shipping and hotel magnate Daniel E. Taylor will speed its comfortable way to Hialeah every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, departing from the FEC station at 11:30 in West Palm Beach and from Delray Beach at 11:45.

The Biltmore yacht moorings are welcoming some of the country's most pretentious yachts afloat and largest yacht of the season arriving from Baton Rouge, Louisiana is the "Wilmar" skippered by T. J. Markley. Mr. Markley noted for his colorful cocktail parties aboard ship recently entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Allan S. Menter of Miami Beach and Mrs. Valerie Mann, Houston, Texas. Col. and Mrs. Edward C. Bloomer of East Orange in port with their handsome new yacht, the "Fagala" had as their yachting guests, Major General and Mrs. Edward C. Rose of Mantalokin, New Jersey who have been the incentive for a round of gay parties. General Rose, a crack tennis player entered the Biltmore's weekly round robin tennis tournament playing with Otto Sauer of Cleveland, Ohio, John Reed, Concord, New Hampshire, and Byron Thomas.

The Biltmore, always a favorite with sportsmen, will welcome several colorful groups this season. Returning for their third southern "hegira" at the Biltmore are a group of Chicago business magnates from Chicago, who stage their own private golf tournament during their annual two weeks' sojourn. All members of Chicago's fashionable Westmoreland Club, the group is headed by Sterling Peacock, vice-president of N. W. Ayer and Son. This exclusive coterie from the mid-west will include Graham McCorkle, Mr. and Mrs. William Otter, Lloyd Neely, Fred Jensen and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Holland. Mr. McCorkle recently retired as chairman of the Bell Telephone System.

One of the country's most noted group of niblick wielders will headquarter at the Biltmore when members of the New York Athletic Club Golfers arrive for their annual golfing holiday. Frank Forbes, assistant chairman of the group and 1951 Florida golf champion will be the defending champion. Last year the anglers of the New York Athletic Club staged their annual fishing tournament at Dan Taylor's sportsman's Paradise and set a new mark in sailfish catches for the Palm Beaches.

On the "entertainment side" of life at the Biltmore are the nightly dances on the romantic palm studded Tropical Terrace overlooking the tranquil waters of Lake Worth, while the West India Room and Terrace has become the focal point of smart nitery entertainment on the island. A distinctive and discriminating series of talented entertainers plus two orchestras and French cuisine masterfully directed by Chef George Mouton has made the West India Room a decided "must" on the night club circuit.

Florida's top aquatic shows, starring a bevy of streamlined mermaids are presented twice a month on Sundays at the Biltmore's salt water pool and fashion shows featuring fabulous modes on alternate Sundays.

The Sunday night smorgasbords under the direction of Chef Pettengill with the largest variety of imported foods and delicacies in Florida, and the tempting daily buffet luncheons on the Tropical Terrace have contributed extensively towards the ever increasing popularity of the Biltmore whose guests believe tops in food and accommodations are major items of a Florida holiday.

Jai-alai—The Game of Death

THE STRANGER, seeing jai-alai the first time, will be momentarily confused—it's a strange game, and the large wicker baskets, or "cestas," laced tightly to the players' hands, are at first grotesque in appearance, and, until a little bit is known about the ancient Basque game, the game seems without purpose.

But stick around, amigo—watch a couple of points, figure out the game—and from then on, hold on to your seat!

Barroso, a retired Jai-alai player, is official "cesta-maker" at the Biscayne Fronton. He is kept busy constantly repairing the comparatively fragile baskets.

It's really the world's fastest game—with brawny two-hundred pounders, right arms thick as an average man's leg, slamming a granite-like ball around at speeds in excess of 150 miles per hour—climbing walls to heights of eight and ten feet; thudding to the floor in slamming falls that echo through the canyon-like Biscayne Jai Alai Fronton.

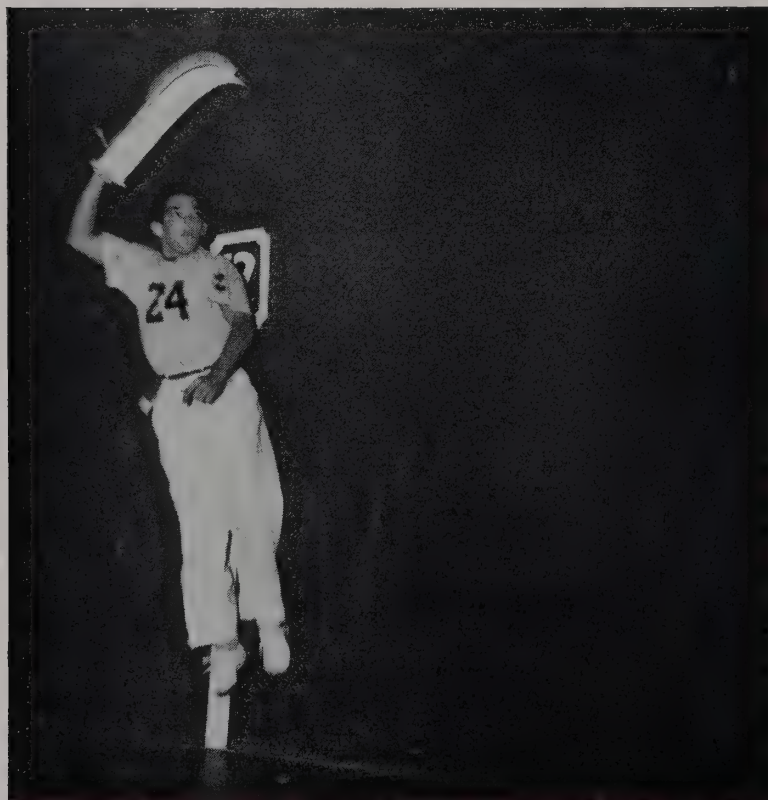

It's the world's fastest—most dangerous sport—bar none—and it's being played this season by 32 of the finest pro athletes anywhere in the world . . . all of them top stars in Cuba, Spain or Mexico.

After 25 years of play at the Fronton, jai-alai is enjoying one of its greatest seasons, with pari-mutuel wagering approximately 25 percent above last year, and attendance nearly 30 percent above the '50-'51 season.

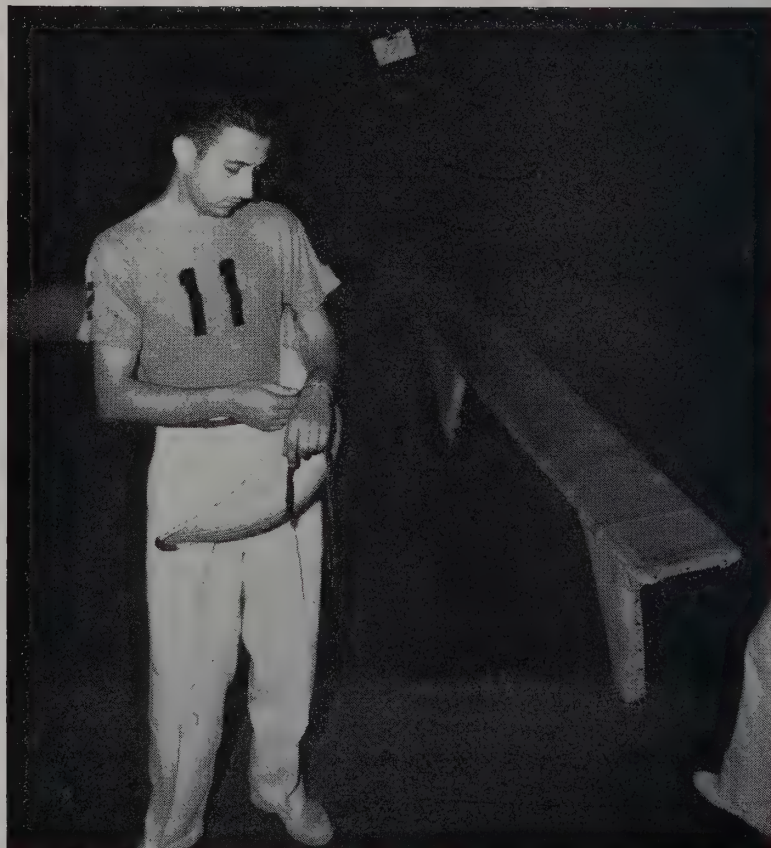

Richard I. Berenson, President and General Manager of the Biscayne Fronton, and the man generally credited with bringing the game to America and keeping it alive, believes that a constant publicity campaign, plus unceasing effort on the part of the players' manager and matchmaker at the Fronton, a gentlemanly ex-jai-alai star, Pedro Mir, to match the players closely to insure a tight game, have been two of the most important factors in the continued growth of the great game.

The Biscayne Jai-Alai Fronton is owned and operated by the Fronton Exhibition Company, of which Berenson is President and General Manager, and his son, Stan Berenson, is Assistant General Manager.

Berenson has pioneered jai-alai's introduction in America, and despite setbacks, immigration headaches, interna-

Carlitas, returning a fast service. The cancha, or court of the fronton is built with a special finish of concrete to absorb the punishment of the heavy ball.

Guarda, with cesta under his arm, his No. 11 prominent on the front of his jersey, removes his watch before going out into the violent action of the court.

tional complications and the necessity for travelling to every corner of practically all Spanish-speaking countries, in search of players, he has been jai-alai's only successful American promoter.

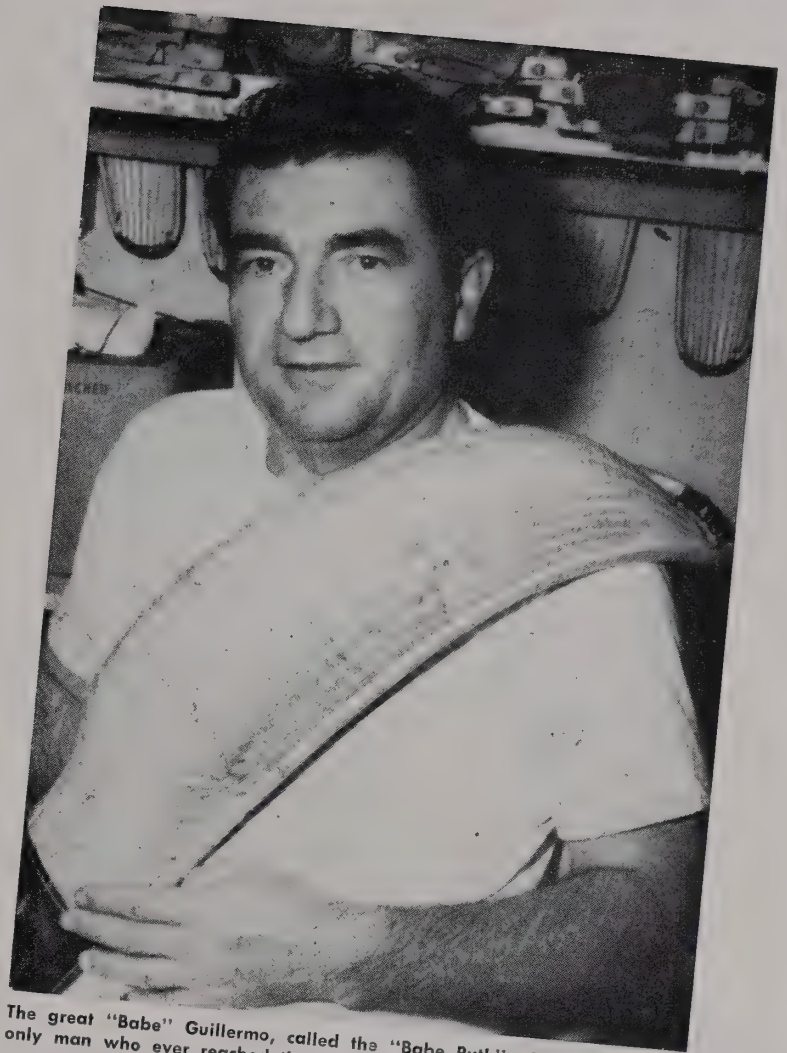

Stan Berenson has literally grown up in the mammoth Fronton, and knows more about jai-alai and jai-alai players than any other American. He travels the Basque countries of Spain and the frontons of Mexico and Cuba each summer in search of players, accompanied by Players' Manager and Matchmaker Pedro Mir, retired jai-alai star.

Jai-alai, or "pelota," as the players call the game, is one of the oldest sports—dating back, actually, to the day the cave-man tossed a rock against the wall of his cavern, down through the Egyptians, the American Indian . . . practically every known civilization has played one form or another of the modern game.

The words "jai-alai," in Spanish, refer literally to the day on which "pelota" is played—"merry festival." The American usage of "jai-alai" is actually a slight corruption of the Spanish significance, since the Basque and Spanish peoples consider Sunday, or any other day on which the entire village population turns out to see the star "pelotaris" or jai-alai players, test their skill, is actually a day of festival.

In the Basque provinces of Spain, centered in the northern part of the Iberian peninsula, jai-alai is an athletic obsession with the townspeople. Those unable to wield the larger "cestas," or baskets, use small sticks, or, in some areas, play the game using only the hand.

Fundamentally, the American game is played much like handball. The first player is the server. He must bounce the ball once on the cement floor, then, on the bounce, throw it with his cesta to the front wall, or "frontis." The ball must bounce off the frontis, and strike the floor, or "cancha," between two lines marked on the cancha. If the ball strikes in that area, it is in play, and the second player must return it to the front wall. The ball must be returned by a player before the second bounce.

The great "Babe" Guillermo, called the "Babe Ruth" of Jai-alai, is the only man who ever reached the level of Erdoza Menor, the man called by the Basques, "el phenomino".

Sounds simple, doesn't it? But—that ball, hard as a rock, with more bounce than a tennis ball, rockets around

"Bala", in English, "The Bullet", returning a service with his cesta held at right angle to the floor, or cancha. Many players of the violent game have died from ball injuries.

Joaquin Arratibel taking a shot off the wall. A great "pelotari" is always a Basque, because the Basque Jai-alai player is literally born into the game, having at least one close relative in the game, with family traditions to protect.

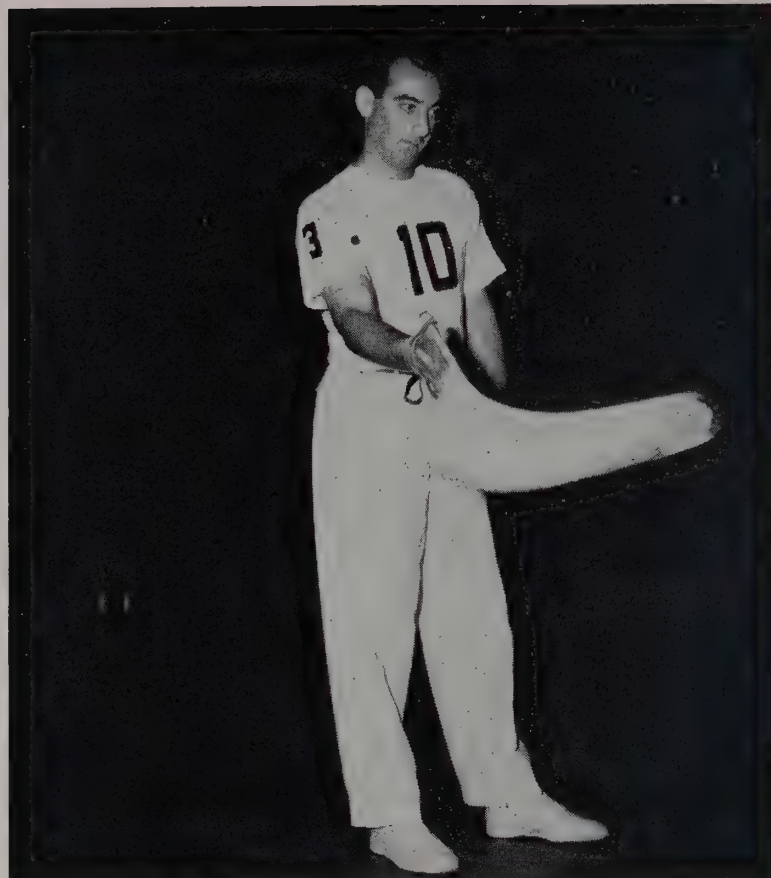

the court and off the walls at speeds in excess of 150 miles per hour, often travelling so swiftly it dissolves into a white blur of movement. Additionally, the ball is loaded with "english," or spin—it never bounces twice the same way, and the spin must be taken from the ball by the player, who gives his cesta a twisting motion as he catches the pelota. If the "english" isn't absorbed in the cesta before the player returns it, the ball will carom out of the cesta and onto the floor, or the player will be unable to return it accurately.

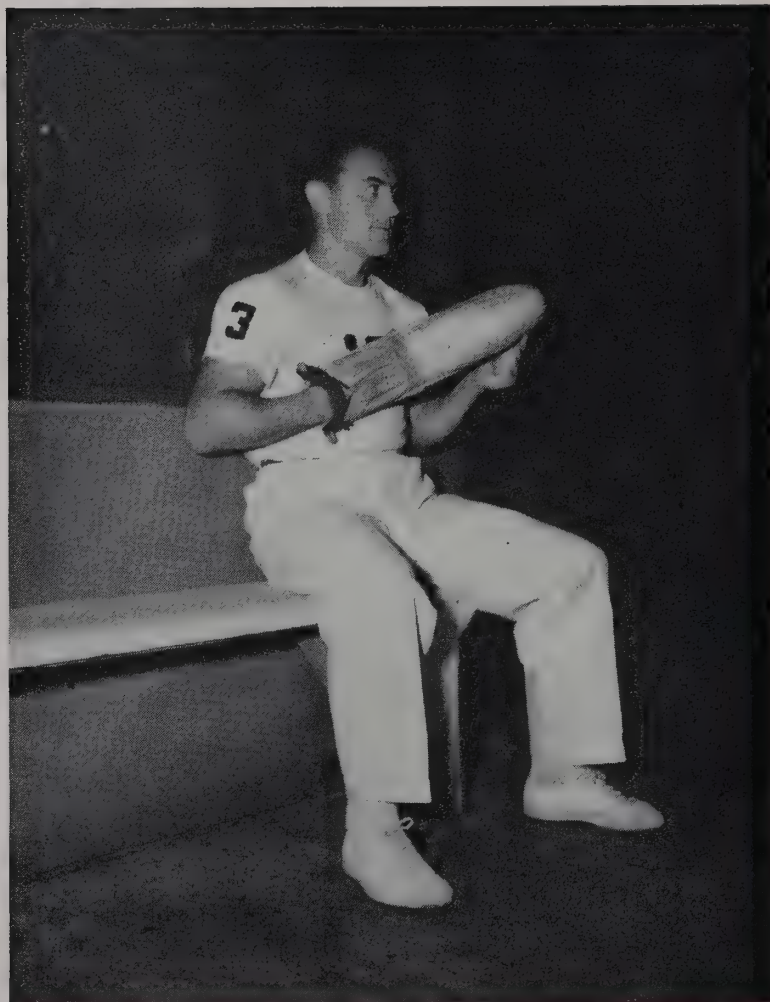

A professional player, who has played the game for eighteen or nineteen years, can and often does, look like a raw amateur when he attempts to catch a pelota loaded with english. If he doesn't take off the spin, then the ball is very likely to hop right out of his cesta, and onto the floor, while he pours his tremendous strength into a return that leaves him flat on the floor, with the pelota spinning like a top, right in front of him.

When a player is unable to return the ball to the front wall, his competitor wins the point, and remains on the court to meet the challenge of a new player. American jai-alai is played with five, six, and seven teams or players, and the longest game runs for only seven points.

In other countries, the game is much longer. For example, Echeverria—Ignacio Echeverria—the current holder of the world's jai-alai singles championship title, played a 30-point game at the Fronton Mexico, just before coming to Miami to start the season here. Ten and twenty point games are routine for the Spanish players, and, as a matter of fact, they protest the shorter American games, since they feel they are only beginning to play when they reach seven points, or, in some game, five points, and the game is finished.

The game, dripping with tradition, history and color, has produced some great sports personalities, all with one common obsession—pelota. Some players, like Erdosa Menor, the greatest player the game has ever produced, feel their lives are over when they can no longer play.

Cestas and pelotas are the important "gimmicks" of jai-alai. A player, who bought his first cesta from a basket-maker in, say, Maquina, Viscaya, Spain, will never use a cesta made by another man. However, the Biscayne Fronton does have a "cesta-maker", Barroso, and he is, of course, a retired jai-alai player. Barroso repairs the cestas used at the Fronton, and he is busy constantly, for the comparatively fragile baskets are easily broken if the pelota slams into them at the wrong angle.

The Fronton also employs a ball maker, who hammers the composition of goat-skin, rubber and leather into a ball of precise weight, shape and form, and just about the consistency of granite. The balls are the most temperamental items in the game. On a damp day, they must be warmed under an infra-red light, so they will be lively. On cold days, they must be warmed, or the rubber will go dead. On hot days, they must be dipped in a touch of water—they become too lively.

The cancha, or court, at the fronton, is built with a special finish of concrete, to absorb the terrific pounding of the ball. The frontis, or front wall, is made of granite blocks, 12 inches thick. It is finished with gunite, a special concrete mix, applied under pressure. Spectators are protected by a wire screen, covering the entire distance of the 176 foot court.

It's a great game—really the world's most dangerous—many players have died, right on the cancha, when hit by that ball...and it's a thrilling game...and you're all invited.

New Frontiers for Sportsmen

THE FOOT OF THE WHITE MAN had seldom before tread the shores of Fresh Creek, when Skipper Whippie Foster of the 65-foot yacht Makaira bore down hard on the helm prior to making a landing over the clear sandy bottom of the limpid stream on the east coast of Andros.

That was in December 1948 when most fishermen were content to tackle the big ones off the Nova Scotia coast in summer and the Florida Keys in the balmy winter. The exception was Charles F. Johnson who piscatorally speaking was sighing for new worlds to conquer.

The north eastern coast of Andros offered adventure and rich rewards for the explorer of the many channels and shoals that constituted a challenge to the man who knew the thrills of bringing to gaff a 600-pound tuna off the tip of Florida or playing with a big Marlin in Bimini's splendid fishing grounds on the South Atlantic Coast.

Fresh Creek where the landing was made has a good harbor for about 6 feet of depth at low tide. There is a break in the reef east of the entrance which is about 100 yards wide. Plenty of caves and caverns are here, for this was once the land of pirates and smugglers.

The natives soon learned of the presence of the newcomers and gave the party a royal welcome.

As guests of honor a fire dance was given on one of the starlit nights, with young men and girls performing remarkable feats of endurance amid weird chants and gesticulations under a full tropical moon, making a spectacle once seen, never to be forgotten.

Fishing for marlin brought back the memory to Mr. Johnson of the July day in 1945 when the recent winner of the Seventh Cat Cay International Tuna Tournament brought in his first big marlin.

Here is an excerpt of his experience from the yacht's log:

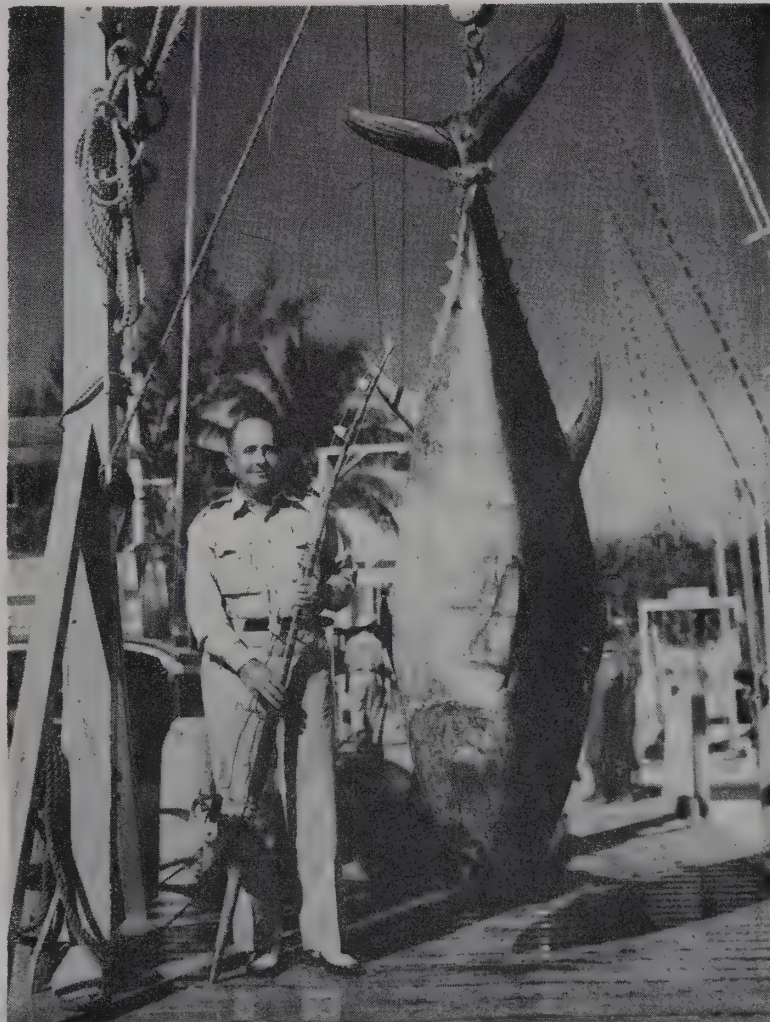

The morning broke with rain and squalls. Fishing looked bad. When the rain let up and the weather improved, we shoved off at 10.30 A.M. with plenty of bonefish for bait and full of hope and ambition.

Every man was on the alert. As we left the reef, both lines were baited with a five pound bonefish. The first thing one learns in marlin fishing is to "always be ready." We were about two miles off north shore. Then—like a thunderbolt—a huge streak came surging from the port side and flashed through the water, so fast that a white streak followed in his wake. I have never seen a vicious lunge at a bait! The blue marlin had the bonefish in a flash and away that great gladiator went on a mad rush, cutting the water like a torpedo and gaining speed and momentum all the time. The reel was spinning so fast it literally buzzed. I let him run with only enough drag on to keep the line from snarling. I tried to remember all I had read and heard on the proper way to hook and handle a marlin. I surely must not fail at this most exciting moment of my whole life, to strike him hard at the right instant. When I thought the right moment had come, I threw the drag on full and struck him with all my might. When the line tightened, I nearly lost my seat in the chair. The harness strained. The line surely couldn't withstand such a terrific strain. I know now why 54 thread line is needed plus a very heavy duty rod and reel and a strong back.

I struck him several times and he slowed in his mad rush but only momentarily. Far away he lunged again. I then reduced the drag some, because I now felt he was going to jump. The reel was taking a terrific beating at this point. He was gaining speed every second and away on his second great record run. Then out of the water he came in the wildest burst of speed, leaping into the air about 20 or 30 feet and still moving like greased lightning. He surely must have jumped 75 to 100 feet and we again saw our blue marlin.

We tightened our drag and stopped his wild rush. I worked him hard as I had him coming our way now. After several hundred feet of line had been recovered he decided to sound. He went down and down, taking more and more line. The spool getting smaller and smaller. By now it was apparent he was heading for the bottom of the ocean.

When he finally stopped, 600 feet of our line was gone. Then came the battle to get him started up again. We manoeuvred the boat to assist as much as possible, knowing full well that the sharks might take over at any time. Luck was with us and after much tugging and back breaking work, we finally brought him to the surface un mutilated. He measured 13 feet 3 inches and weighed 555 pounds. His tail measured 55 inches from tip to tip.

Though this 638 pounds of fighting blue tuna caught by Mr. Johnson off the prolific shores of Cat Cay, Bahamas would generally be regarded by expert tuna fishermen as a good day's work, the tenacious sportsman caught no less than 14 tunas of varying size in a single day. This we believe is a world's record in fish poundage.

One of the most lavish of social parties of the season was that of Mr. Edward J. Barber and daughter, Helen, at the fashionable Patio Restaurant. More than a hundred guests attended.

Smart Restaurants

LONG YEARS OF EXISTENCE in a resort center where patrons demand the best of everything, the distinguished Patio Restaurant, Sunset and North County Road, not only has been able to hold the pace, but has moved ahead season by season until now it is regarded as "the spot" in Palm Beach for fine food, excellent music and best of entertainment.

The smart set of this celebrated resort select the fashionable Patio for their parties, and the reasons are obvious. The staff of the Patio knows just what to do to please the whim and fancy of even the most fastidious person. Staffers know the regular patrons, and they make a practice of noting the likes and dislikes of new guests so that they might satisfy them the more on subsequent visits.

Diners arrive early at the Patio so that they may enjoy a drink on the open air terrace or in the cocktail lounge, where on cool evenings one may enjoy the cozy atmosphere of an open fireplace. The smartly decorated cocktail lounge is a favorite meeting place for the Patio's elite clientele.

The Patio maintains a three-point policy in providing for the wants of discriminating resorters: Fine food, excellent music, and the best entertainment that can be secured. Proof that their policy is popular is shown by the "names" on the club's register—names that are known internationally.

With a record informal opening in late December, the Patio followed with another record New Year's Eve dinner dance, and came back again with another new mark on its formal opening night, January 30.

One of the most lavish parties of the season was given at the Patio in January as Mr. Edward J. Barber and daughter, Helen, entertained more than one hundred guests. They included Mr. and Mrs. Richard Alley, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. George Benisch, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Berkowitz, Mr. Alvin Boettcher, Mr. Samuel S. Briggins, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Burger, Mr. and Mrs. T. Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. John Cushman, Mr. Chester Cawood, Mr. Ben Conlin, Mr. Joseph Delaney, Mr. Frank Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. William Doerschuck, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dunkle, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Many big names of business and industry were found in that party of the Barbers. They are members of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests, who had a week-long tournament at the Palm Beach Golf Club.

NIGHTLIFE OF THE WINTER COLONY is now centering about the Florentine Room in the Miramar Restaurant, the newest addition to the after dark spots in the Palm Beach area.

Patrons of the Miramar, as well as newcomers, are finding the glamorous atmosphere of the Florentine Room to their liking. It is an intimate and decidedly cosy room, with a European background and a completely different decor. Soft lights, emanating from wall panels depicting crests of Florentine families, cast a subdued and flattering glow over the room, and creates an atmosphere perfect for the intimacy featured.

Continuous entertainment from 10 p. m. until 3 a. m. by Tillie Ditierle and James Gavit is another reason why more and more residents and visitors to Palm Beach are choosing the Florentine Room.

All facilities of the restaurant remain open until 3, and the delectable suppers served there are a gourmet's delight. One of the favorites are Coquilles of Sea Food New Orleans, a new dish made of crab meat, Dover sole and Bay scallops, baked with cheese and paprika and served in clam shells. Also popular is the Spiedini alla Romana. This is mozzarella cheese served on toast, first baked with anchovies and pure olive oil. Besides these and other delicious delicacies are steak club and combination sandwiches, Maine Lobster Newburg, scrambled eggs with bacon, poached eggs Benedict, chicken a la king and many more palatable dishes.

At the Miramar were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn jr., Mr. and Mrs. Donald S. Leas jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gubelmann, Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey Curran jr., Mrs. Harold Fitzgerald, Mrs. Stewart Hamilton, Mr. Chester Dale, Mr. Charles Clarke Jelke, Miss May Howes, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. To welcome the Joel Cheek Farrells just recently arrived in Palm Beach, a dinner party given by Mrs. Jane Obolensky took place at the smart Worth Avenue night spot, The Music Box. L. to R. standing are the guests of honor, Mrs. Farrell and Mr. Farrell, Mrs. Obolensky, Mr. Herbert Farrell, Jr., Mrs. Young Kaufman and Mr. Kaufman. Seated at head of table is Mr. Peter Neidecker, and left to right are: Mrs. Paul L. Fentress, Mrs. Harold Mitchell Van Husan, Mr. Van Husan, Mrs. Philip C. Kauffmann, and Mr. Johnston Browne, Jr.

SMART ENTERTAINMENT plus superior food leads scores of Palm Beachers and residents of sister communities back night after night to the Music Box, sitting pretty on a prominent site in the world's most famous fashionable shopping center, Worth Avenue.

Manager-owners, Martin McNally and Joe Moss do a thorough job of concentrating on the Music Box when the Palm Beach season gets into its swing. Their cuisine, American and very specially Cantonese, is a big attraction with guests from all along the Gold Coast who whip up to Palm Beach expressly to dine at the Music Box. And when it comes to entertainment, if that branch of the Music Box menage were to join hands they could with the greatest ease, put on a full-fledged musical comedy.

Back this year, and big drawing cards at the Music Box are the Mary Wood Trio—Mary Wood, husband Freddie Pareiss and Tony Mellis, playing nightly for dinner guests and later in the evening for dancing when the Music Box becomes Worth Avenue's smartest supper club. Then there's Peter Carew, piano cavorting, jaunty ballad-singing artist who is never at a loss for a comeback.

friends, and stoppers-in from a day at business fill the tropically inviting cocktail lounge at the Music Box, it's Charlie Wright, jr., with calypso singing and accordion strumming who contributes to arriving at a decision by many five o'clock patrons to just stay on and make it an evening at the Music Box.

A rendezvous for gourmets for members of the Palm Beach, Delray and Boynton Beach winter colonies is the Opera House, now open for its second season on Route 1 at Boynton.

The restaurant and bar are under the direct supervision of Harold and Gwen Gaillard, who own the Opera House at Nantucket Island, Mass.

The decor of the restaurant is definitely Victorian, and is highlighted by rare antiques, old theatrical posters, prints and old fashioned oil lamps.

The cuisine has been acclaimed by gourmets, and chef Maurice, formerly of Voisin's at New York, is responsible for the delectable concoctions.

Duke LaKai is at the piano until 3 a. m., and his exciting repertoire includes anything from Chopin to Carmichael, besides all the new hit tunes of the day.

Noted at the Opera House were Mr. and Mrs. Stewart B. Iglehart, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Frick, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smoot, Mr. and Mrs. Persifor Frazer, Mr. and Mrs. James Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Gold, Mr. and Mrs. D. Russell Johns, Mrs. Ruth Chagnon, Mrs. Richard Stiegler, Mr. and Mrs. John C. ## Did you have them in Mind when you made your WILL?

Have you thought of the difficulties they might be forced to meet, with little skill in legal matters and in time of great emotional stress? Is your will simple, yet complete and legally sound? Is it in the hands of a skilled administrator? Have you arranged this, your last service to them, in the best possible way? If you're troubled over any phase of your will, or feel that it's not up-to-date, why not discuss it with your attorney and our trust officers?

Hop Along Casually!

Some folks plan a trek South in the winter, others head North. But wherever your plans take you why not make The Greenbrier a stopover along the line.

Driving a great distance is always more pleasurable and safer if you take your time and drive casually. You'll find fun at The Greenbrier you've never dreamed of. Golf on any of the three magnificent courses, swimming, hiking and some of the most picturesque bridle paths in America. The baths are here, too, at the world-famous White Sulphur Springs Spa. Yes, every day is a pleasure day from morning until night here at The Greenbrier.

So hop along casually folks, and pay us a visit along the way at The Greenbrier. Reduced rates now in effect, from $15.00 per day, per person—including Greenbrier's incomparable meals.

JOHN B. REID says

Pertaining to
DELRAY BEACH SHORES

May I:

Have your attention for a few minutes of your valuable reading time and present for your pleasure — “an announcement of our present new project — and “news” of our next development” — and extend to you a cordial invitation to “inspect our properties at your convenience”.

Delray Beach Shores:

A complete residential community. Something new and something different — “each lot a water-front property”, and located less than one-half mile South of Delray Beach on South Ocean Boulevard. This development is practically complete with only 70 water-front homesites, and located just across the street from the ocean, with one-half mile of choice property — of which one-quarter mile faces Ocean Boulevard and one-quarter mile on the deep Florida Intra-Coastal Waterway. Lots now priced at $6,000.00 each, and upwards.

Public Invited to Our Sale Sunday, February 17

Then -- our next -- “And we hope, history-making development” --

Immediately South of the above, and of similar size —

*We are proud to present --
“The Presidential Colony of America.”*

The land has already been conveyed to this company. Strictly an apartment area. Each building will be carefully planned and erected to “typify the particular period of architecture of each President”, and to be named in sequence for each of our former Presidents. For instance — “The Mount Vernon” for George Washington; “The Brick Colonial” for Thomas Jefferson; “The Log Cabin, type for Abraham Lincoln”; and so forth.

Each building is to be of two stories in height, and to consist of four to twelve units in each building.

Our Executive Office will be “an exact replica” of The White House and will be used in the future as “The Administrative Building”.

Plans for “this coming historical development” are now in progress for 1953 completion.

Cadillac

Where a Lady steps away—Relaxed!

Oh, how restful it is to drive the Golden Anniversary Cadillac! In fact, the hour at its wheel is the relaxing one of the whole waking day. You just sit back and rest—and the weight of your hand and the touch of your toe do all the work. There is even a choice of driving ranges—so that you can select precisely the type of performance you want. At a flick of the finger, you can have extra power and acceleration for city traffic and mountain driving . . . or smooth, quiet, gas-saving performance for the open road.

And if you have chosen the new power steering for your Cadillac—well, as much as seventy-five per cent of normal steering effort is removed . . . and parking is transformed from a problem to downright fun! Yes, a lady steps away relaxed when she leaves her Cadillac. And proud and happy, too—for it's a never-ending pleasure to drive a car so universally respected as the Standard of the World. Why not visit your Cadillac dealer today and let him show you what a pleasure driving can be.

Party Hints

By Berlin Griffin, Inc.

HIGHBALL: The popular Highball is easy to mix, yet is frequently prepared incorrectly.

One jigger of OLD FORESTER Bourbon Whisky should be used in a 10 or preferably 12 ounce glass. The drink should be well iced and filled with either club soda, sparkling water, or plain water. The plain water should be either spring water, or a water to which no chemical has been added.

OLD FASHIONED: Mix 1 lump of sugar with 2 dashes Angostura Bitters and dissolve in tablespoon of water in Old Fashioned glass. Add 1 cube of ice, 1 jigger of OLD FORESTER Bourbon Whisky,  $\frac{1}{2}$  slice of orange, twist of lemon peel, cherry, and 1 pineapple stick. A small amount of club soda may be added if desired. All decorations except twist of lemon peel are optional.

(Originated at Pendennis Club, Louisville, Kentucky, over 50 years ago.)

MANHATTAN: Put 1 dash of Angostura Bitters in mixing glass and fill three-quarters with cracked ice. Add  $\frac{1}{2}$  jigger of sweet Vermouth (Italian) and  $\frac{1}{2}$  jigger KING Whisky. Stir and drain into cocktail glass that has a cherry in it.

(This famous drink originated at Old Delmonico's Restaurant, New York, in the 19th century.)

WHISKY SOUR: Dissolve 1 teaspoon of powdered sugar in the juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon. Add 1 jigger of KING Whisky, and shake with cracked ice. Strain into Whisky Sour glass and garnish with slice of orange and cherry. Many find delicious the unusual flavor that is bestowed by the addition of 2 dashes of Creme de Menthe.

MINT JULEP: One teaspoon sugar in just enough water to dissolve. Bruise three mint sprigs and place in 12 ounce julep cup with the sugar mixture. Fill three-fourths with crushed ice, and add 2 jiggers of OLD FORESTER Bourbon Whisky. Stir gently, then add ice to fill cup. Trim the ends of a bunch of mint, and place stems down in the cup. Serve when frosted.

JOHN COLLINS: Dissolve a heaping teaspoon of granulated sugar in the juice of 1 lemon in a highball glass. Add 1 jigger of KING Whisky and ice cubes. Fill with club soda. For a slightly different flavor, the juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lime and  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon can be used in place of the 1 lemon. This is a cooling and easily prepared summer drink.

OLD KENTUCKY TODDY: Fill a large silver goblet or a large toddy glass  $\frac{1}{2}$  full with small lumps of ice (but not too small). Add 1 dessert spoonful of granulated sugar that has been previously dissolved in 1 teaspoon water. Stir until there is a cold frost on the cup. Then fill with OLD FORESTER Bourbon Whisky. Add twist of lemon peel. Another version is "ON THE ROCKS." Place in an Old Fashioned glass several lumps of cracked ice. Over this pour a jigger of OLD FORESTER and stir until quite cold. Add a twist of lemon peel. If crushed ice is used, this is known as a Bourbon Mist.

DRY MARTINI: Fill a mixing glass with cracked ice  $\frac{1}{2}$  full. Pour in  $\frac{2}{3}$  jigger of Brown-Forman's Gin, then  $\frac{1}{3}$  jigger of dry Vermouth (French), and a dash of Orange Bitters. Stir and strain into cocktail glass with green olive. This order of mixing makes a blended cocktail with less stirring. Bitters or absinthe optional. For a sweet Martini substitute sweet Vermouth (Italian) for the dry.

Note—1 jigger equals  $1\frac{1}{2}$  ounces.

Cuba Offers Full Schedule

HAVANA, gayest of Western Hemisphere capitals, offers a full schedule of activities for tourists during the winter season, in addition to the city's all-year-round attractions of climate, scenic beauty, and comfortable, cosmopolitan living.

The winter Horse Racing Season at Oriental Park, with races every Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. Located in Marianao, a Havana suburb only a few minutes from the center of the city, Oriental Park is a beautiful track, and special handicap and stake races in which horses from all over North and South America compete, make it a popular place with the turf enthusiasts.

There are dog races every evening at nine at the Havana Greyhound Kennel Club, also in Marianao. Somewhat off the subject of racing are cock-fights, presented daily at the Valla Habana beginning at 1 P.M. This exciting sport, relatively unknown in the United States, is very popular with Cubans, and worth at least one visit for the tourist.

Other spectator sports which are at their best during the winter season are jai-alai, the fast Basque game, played every evening except Monday and Friday at the Fronton, and every afternoon at the Habana-Madrid. One of the world's most strenuous sports, jai-alai is played in a specially-constructed court, by two to eight players, who catch and throw a hard ball with incredible speed and accuracy with a basket-like arrangement strapped to one hand.

Baseball, played by excellent professional Cuban teams, may be seen nightly in the Grand Stadium at 9:00 P.M., and there are boxing matches every Saturday at the Sports Palace. At various times during the coming months, a stroll down to Havana's ocean front will provide a good seat for some thrilling sail-boat racing, or a stroll any time to one of the fishing boats tied up at the docks will provide a day's thrilling sport in the off-shore waters.

From February 23 to March 23 there is festival with a religious background. That is Havana's Carnival, famed as one of the gayest and noisiest in the world. There are parades every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, fancy dress balls, and a general lack of inhibitions that is charming and hilarious.

Cat Key Club, Cat Cay, Bahamas, B. W. I.

THE CAT KEY CLUB, exclusive resort of many prominent Americans, situated at Cat Cay, an enchanting island in the Bahamas, British West Indies, got off to a most auspicious start when it formally opened for the 1952 season. Many members and their guests at the club's cottages, in private homes and on yachts anchored here, were on hand for the formal opening and dinner dance held in the spacious Sir Bede Clifford Hall's Patio. The attractive setting was enhanced by a tropical moon, gentle swaying palm trees, dim multi-colored lights and music provided by an American orchestra.

Following the opening, all eyes at this secluded resort, centered on the sixth annual Fort Lauderdale—Cat Cay Race, held Friday January 25th through Saturday, January 26th. The entire resort abounded with activity from early morn till late in the evening. This outstanding and one of the most colorful events of the winter season, is an international classic, and opens the annual yacht racing events in southern waters.—The winner this season was the sloop Caribbee, owned and skippered by Cat Key Club member and author Carleton Mitchell of Annapolis, Maryland. Placing second was the yawl Ocean Queen, owned by R. M. Demere of Savannah, Georgia; and finishing third was Flying Cloud, owned by Fred H. Temple of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Other well-known yachts to finish the race in order were William A. Erwin's Belle of the West; George Lockwood's Lone Star; Cheemaun, owned by George W. Gibbs; Doris III, owned by Baxter Still Jr., of Boston; Xanadu, owned by George Arents Jr.; Manatuck, owned by Hal Wilder; Jubilant, owned by W. Paul Liskey; H. H. Davock's Away; Criterion, owned by Charles H. Cuno; Larry owned by Jacobs Cabassa; and Lady Patty, owned by James Crawford, and which was last year's winner.

Saturday evening, following the conclusion of the race, all owners, skippers and their crews were feted at many cocktail parties and at an elaborate buffet supper in Sir Bede Clifford Hall's Patio. Mr. Louis Rice Wasey, congenial owner of Cat Cay, introduced Mr. Arthur E. Pew Jr. of Bryn Mawr, Pa., as toastmaster, at the same time presenting Mr. Pew with a special trophy for his luxurious yacht Mercury V, which won alone in its special class. Mr. Pew in turn, presented the trophies to all winners of the race, and plaques to all who finished in the popular event. Mr. George R. Loehr, of the Lauderdale Yacht Club was race chairman. Cat Key Club Committee included Mr. Wasey, Mr. Pew, George W. Collier, Arch T. Colwell and Roger W. Converse. The Lauderdale Yacht Club Committee included Henry L. Parker, John D. Ritchey, M. L. Prindle, James K. Pownall, William A. Gilroy Jr., and Harlow P. Davock. Commander Coste and thirty officers of the U. S. Coast Guard Aurora who accompanied the yachts to Cat Cay also attended the dinner given in honor of the yachtsmen.

Cat Cay is an ideal resort for those who seek an undisturbed vacation—but for those who prefer more exuberant activity,—the Cat Key Club's members and their invited guests, and the many home owners here, have a wide selection of social and sporting activities, which are featured at this beautiful and quaint island. Deep-sea fishing, including blue marlin, tuna, king, and innumerable other varieties of fish, and reef fishing, seem to lead in popularity here, with leisurely yachting running a close second. Golf, always a favorite sport of resorters, is enjoyed by almost everyone on the island, on a sporty 9 hole championship course, named the Windsor Downs course, in honor of H.R.H. the Duke of Windsor. Popular James West is the golf professional. Other sports include tennis and skeet. This season, the club has appointed Mr. Dick Keyser, who was formerly at the Homestead in Hot Springs, as skeet professional. Bicycling is another favorite pastime, even tho many automobiles of all makes, are now seen on this remote island.

Currently visiting the Cat Key Club are Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dale Shaffer of La Gorce Island, Miami, well known racing stables owners and formerly of Lexington, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Wasey of New Canaan, Conn., and their two children Jane and John Wasey, who are visiting his uncle and aunt; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gundy of Toronto, Canada, who are staying at Primrose cottage; and Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Moyston of Easton, Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Mitchell of Annapolis, Md., are having as their guests at the Strong cottage, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gubelmann of Oyster Bay, Long Island, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Kellogg of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Rigg of Annapolis and Nassau, and the Messrs. William McWilliam of Annapolis, Benjamin C. Howard of Baltimore, Richard K. Birtram of Miami and Raymond L. Hunt of Marblehead, Mass.

Anchored at the Cat Key Yacht Club's dock are Mrs. Henry D. Mercer of Rumson, N. J., who is aboard her beautiful Holland built yacht Blue Jacket. She is entertaining Dr. and Mrs. Sigar Johnson of Montclair, N. J., before leaving for Nassau, where Mr. Mercer is arriving from Europe. They will return to Cat Cay with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Smith of Cardiff, Wales, who will have a cottage at Cat Cay.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rand III of Cleveland, here on their 120 foot luxurious cruising yacht Tara, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont III of Wilmington, Del., Mr. and Mrs. John Shaheen of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Osborn of Willoughby, Ohio and Mr. and Mrs. Wallis Nichols of Cleveland.

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Barbour of Englewood, N. J., at Pelican House Cottage, are his brothers Stanton and Gordon Barbour, who are enjoying Cat Cay before leaving for a tour of South America.

Mr. Ross D. Siragusa Jr., a Yale student, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross D. Siragusa of Barrington, Ill., who winter at their Cat Cay home "Pop's Place." Their daughter, Miss Irene Mary "Suzi" Siragusa, is also visiting her parents during her school holidays.

Other prominent Cat Cay residents here for the winter season are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Pew Jr., of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and their children Sheila and Dickie. Also Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Stringer Jr., of Ligonier, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John M. Olin of East Alton, Ill., who reside at Trade Winds; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Mathaei of Detroit who have arrived at Topside. Also Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. F. Heyer of Greenwich, Conn., who are at their home Little Paradise; and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Ford Jr., of Grosse Point, Mich., who winter at the Ford cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Crawford of Shaker Heights, Ohio, are at Hi-Tide, and Mr. and Mrs. Wendell W. Anderson of Detroit are at their estate Forever Ambling. Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Badenhausen of Short Hills, N. J., arrived February 20th at their Cat Cay residence.

Society Life

THE LEGITIMATE THEATER came to the resort by way of the Palm Beach Playhouse, and opening nights have created a glamour long familiar to New York and Hollywood, but definitely new to Palm Beach. On the site of the historic Royal Poinciana, the playhouse was transformed from the old slat house of the hotel into a modern theater of the arena type.

Philip Barry's Animal Kingdom was the initial play of the season and starred diminutive Veronica Lake and Peter Cookson. The second production of the season was Noel Coward's Blythe Spirit with Eva Gabor, and an exciting season of gay, sophisticated plays is planned.

The Stephen Sanfords entertained with a dinner at "Los Incas" preceding the opening play, and included among their guests glamorous Cobina Wright Sr. who was here for a few days before going to New York where her memoirs, "I Never Grew Up," were published February 18 by Prentice-Hall, Inc. Mrs. Wright came here from Uruguay where she attended the motion picture festival, along with delegates from the United States, Japan, Great Britain, Italy, France, Switzerland and several other countries. With her from this country were Merle Oberon, Reginald Gardner, Constance Moore, Robert Cummings, John Barrymore Jr. and Barbara Britton.

After a Palm Beach sojourn, Mrs. Wright went to New York and then to Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago where she is making personal appearances in connection with her book.

A large company of friends was recently entertained at cocktails by Mrs. C. Aubrey Cartwright who is passing the season at the Colony. Her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Messmore Kendall, Mr. B. Sumner Welles, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Pillsbury, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart A. Prosser, Mr. and

Mrs. Harold Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Salisbury, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Pierson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Philip C. Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. C. # Par Avion from Paris

WHAT STARTED OUT TO BE a list of the ten best-dressed women in Paris is now 50 names long, and if we didn't close it, herewith, it would go on and on. Everybody consulted had at least ten candidates, all of them much more chic than anybody else's.

One candidate everyone agrees upon is the Duchesse de Levis-Mirepoix. Young and lovely, as well as well-dressed. But this judgment of Paris does not go, necessarily, to beauty. Neither youth nor beauty are requisites of smartness in France. "She has much charm" is considered the highest compliment; it is paid to the woman who is graceful, well-groomed, gracious, poised and witty. Age has nothing to do with it. Such historic French charmers as Georges Sand kept their entourage of admirers until they died of old age.

At the moment, these are the best-dressed women of Paris. All have beaucoup de charme:

Princesse Cyrille Troubetzkoy, Baroness Jean de l'Epee, Baronne Alain de Rothschild, Comtesse Yves St. Seine, Marquise Caumont La Force, Lady Fellowes, Comtesse de Chambure, Comtesse de Contades Begassiere, Marquise de Paris, Duchesse de Brissac, Madame Pol-Roger, Lady Diana Cooper, Jacqueline Delubac, Lady Deterding, Madame Francois Dupre, Madame Lillaz, Mrs. Solvay, Baroness de Waldner, Madame de Anchorena, Madame G. Bergery, Madame A. Fabre-Luce, Madame Dewavrin, Comtesse de Segonzac, Madame Steve Passeur, Comtesse de Chavagnac, The Begum Khan, Madame Marcel Rochas, Madame Jacqueline Patenotre, Madame Arturo Lopez-Willshaw, Madame Massigilli, Princesse Caroline Murat, Princesse A. de Broglie, Vicomtesse de Faramond, Lorraine Dubonnet, Baroness de Cabrol, Princesse Colonna, Mrs. Danet, Princesse Guy de Faucigny-Lucinge, Lady Mendl (Yvonne Riley), Marquise de Amodio, Madame Malard, Madame Jacques Fath, Madame David Weill, Madame Louis Arpels, Michelle Morgan, Edwige Feuillere, Mrs. Burckardt, Madame Blanche Montel.

Quite a few of them added eclat to the Roosevelt Birthday Ball. The Honorable Reginald and Mrs. Fellowes, Princesse Guy de Faucigny-Lucinge, the Marquis and Marquise de Amodio, Comtesse Andre de Contades, the Duke and Duchesse de Levis-Mirepoix, Baron and Baroness Alain de Rothschild and Baron and Baroness Christian de Waldner were all patrons.

Kenyon Bolton, young attache of the American Embassy, is still hearing how much fun everybody had at the ball. As working chairman, Mr. Bolton lived and even lunched (no small sacrifice in Paris!) beside his telephone for weeks in advance of the party; at least half of the phone transactions were in French, which he speaks fluently.

Among other things he had to do in French was rent part of the Garde Republicaine de Paris for the evening—the red-coated, steel-helmeted soldiers who stand at attention at important social events in Paris. (Part of their facial immobility comes from having fought with the French underground during the war.) They are engaged through the French Ministry of Armed Forces, for 165 francs an hour per soldier, on condition that somebody important, like a general, will be present at the party.

Mr. Bolton had plenty of gold braid to justify their presence—two French generals, three American generals, three brigadier generals and seven major generals. He had also the American Ambassador, and one of France's favorite Americans, Eleanor Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in black lace flecked with gold, shared a table with Ambassador Bruce and his handsome young wife. Dancers going past slowed up to gaze discreetly at Mrs. Bruce's disc-shaped emerald and diamond earrings and matching bracelet, and her emerald satin gown. Slim, dark Mrs. James W. Riddleberger, wife of the senior Foreign Service officer detailed to M. S. A., was in dramatic red faille. The former Amelie Johanna Otken, she was born in Java, where her father, Dr. Otken, was on medical duty, and was married to the American diplomat in Geneva.

Vice-chairman of the ball, Mrs. Horace Reed, wore black with a black net stole.

Coming in after midnight to make an approving survey was Eric Hawkins, managing editor of the Herald Tribune. Mr. Hawkins, who has been editing Paris life for some thirty years, skilfully sidestepped our request to confer the mythical golden apple on any of the beauties present. "You know I don't get out very much, and I really don't know all these countesses," he said. A diplomat, too.

The decorations committee, Phyllis Moir and Mrs. H. Smith-Hutton, had little decorating to do—the ballroom of the Palais d'Orsay is not only panelled and frescoed in the French tradition of elegance, but lighted with swags of crystal that are a whole dazzling show in themselves.

It was the ticket committee that had the problem of trying to keep the second ballroom—known as "the blue room"—happy. As reservations kept coming in, it was necessary to duplicate the party in a second ballroom. The volunteer floor show cheerfully contributed two complete per-performances: Eddie Constantine, Edith Piaf's leading man in her last show, "La P'tite Lili," and one of the best-like artists in Paris, sang his own version, in French, of "On Top of Old Smoky"; Jean Sablon did his fiacre song, Mary Meade conducted her famous vocal "search for an apartment in Paris," and Le Ballet Libertain came from the Casino de Paris, complete with the old balloon man.

Jacqueline Delubac's flair for fashion is indisputable. The former wife, and leading lady of Sacha Guitry is distinguished for her elegance. Her name is the title of one of his more serious plays, Jacqueline.

Eight champagne firms stocked the bars, and at 150 francs for a generous glass everyone could indulge freely.

Paintings donated by Braque, Leger and others were auctioned to help swell the fund for French polio victims. The five million francs raised was regarded as very good by all concerned—here charity balls do not aspire to raise the huge sums that Palm Beach affairs do.

It would have been a pleasure for the young crowd which centers in the American Embassy to pelt rice at golden-haired Karen Sigrid Frayne. But the youngest daughter of the Thomas Eugene Fraynes was loyal to the orange blossoms of her native California, and went home to San Francisco to be married to John Wellington Stewart, on January 7.

The beaux who made an early morning appearance at the Gare St. Lazare to see Karen off when she left Paris didn't know she was going home to be a bride—the radiant look she was wearing is characteristic. She and Jack Stewart were married in St. Emydius Church, had a honeymoon cottage at Palm Springs, and are now at home in Santa Monica.

Karen was a sub-deb when her father came to Europe with the Marshall Plan; while he was stationed in Greece she was being educated in the American College in Athens and the University of Neuchatel in Switzerland. When her parents came to live in Paris, Karen joined them and her sister Natalie here. Her bridegroom attended the University of San Francisco and Loyola University at Los Angeles and served in the navy in the war.

For Madame Marcel Rochas, being one of the best-dressed women of Paris has an added distinction. She designs everything she wears, and this year, for the first time, has created the entire Rochas collection. Only 29, Madame Rochas, the former Helene de Brignolles, has been designing clothes since her marriage ten years ago. Now that the collection is launched, she will have more time at home with the Rochas' two children, Francois and Sophie.

Women's Championship of Palm Beach

THE FEMININE GOLFING CONTINGENT always attracts sizeable galleries, and this year was no exception. They came to see the girls perform on the Palm Beach Golf Club course of the Breakers Hotel, and, according to Earl Ross, past president of the Metropolitan Golfers Association who refereed the finals, no finer exhibition of sportsmanship could be desired than that exhibited on the links during the week of the Women's Championship of Palm Beach Golf Tournament.

Claire Doran, the Cleveland, Ohio school-teacher, came out the winner, defeating Baltimore's Mary Ann Downey by 2 and 1 in the finals.

The tournament got under way with Grace DeMoss capturing medalist honors with a woman's par 72 round. The Corvallis, Ore., girl, a recent graduate of Oregon State College, matched par hole for hole through the first nine. She took a bogey on No. 11, but got it back with a birdie on 16 in fashioning her fine round. A college chum and tournament trail pal—Edean Anderson, of Helena, Mont.—was medalist the previous year. Grace was five strokes better than her nearest competitor, Barbara Romack of Sacramento, Calif. Defending champion Polly Riley, Ft. Worth; Betty Rowland, Lexington, Ky., and Carol Diringer, Tiffin, Ohio, had 78s.

Favorites survived the first round tests. Starting with 32 in the championship flight on opening day of match play, the 16 winners remained in the championship division and the 16 losers dropped to the first flight. Then the losers from the remaining 16 of the championship went into the championship consolation.

Following the ultimate champion in each flight through the tournament, they went like this:

Claire Doran qualified with an 81. In the first round she had to go 21 holes before she could eke out a victory over Minnie Lee Ashley of Gadsden, Ala., who then won first flight honors. Miss Daron had to go overtime again in the second round to get past Carol Diringer, Tiffin, Ohio, who came right back to win the championship consolation. The match lasted 19 holes. The champion eliminated Grace DeMoss, by a 5 and 4 margin in the quarter-finals, and in the semi-finals she eliminated Edean Anderson by 6 and 5.

Miss Doran was consistently longer off the tee than Miss Downey in the finals. Her approach shots, too, were almost always closer to the pin than her opponent's, and that kept the pressure on the Baltimore girl. The Cleveland girl got on top on the second hole and was never caught, although Miss Downey did keep it close. From the fourth through the ninth they alternated in winning holes, and Miss Doran was only one-up when they made the turn. They halved the next three. Miss Doran went two up on 13 but lost the 14th. She won No. 16 and halved 17 to close out the match.

The title match, hole by hole:

|                 |     |     |        |     |     |           |

| Claire Doran    | 435 | 454 | 646-41 | 443 | 453 | 54        |
| Mary Ann Downey | 445 | 545 | 454-40 | 443 | 543 | 64        |

Consolation—Miss Diringer qualified with a 78. She defeated Mrs. Harold Stone, Ware Shoals, S. C., 7 and 5 in the first round, but fell victim of Claire Doran in her second test. Then in the consolation she bested Kathy McKinnon, Lake Worth, 7 and 6, Betty Rowland, 5 and 4, and defending champion Polly Riley, 6 and 5.

First flight—Miss Minnie Lee Ashley just managed to get in the select 32 when she qualified with an 87, but she went on to win the first flight. After losing to Miss Doran in that 21-hole marathon, Miss Ashley defeated Mrs. Harold Stone, 1 up; Mrs. J. W. Labisky, of Columbus, Ohio, 7 and 6; Vonnie Colby, Ft. Lauderdale, 2 up, and Elizabeth Ridge, of Ft. Lauderdale, 2 and 1.

Second flight—Mrs. Robert Ackerman, of Purchase, N. Y., won this division. She qualified with an 89, and was an 8 and 7 winner over Mrs. J. J. Noerling, Valatie, N. Y., in the first round. She defeated Carol Gallagher, West Palm Beach, 3 and 2, in the second round; Mrs. George Bilowick, Butler, Pa., 3 and 2, in the quarter-finals, and Mrs. John McCuskey, Clarksburg, W. Va., 2 and 1, in the finals.

Third flight—Joan Wassell, Pittsburgh, was the champion of the third flight. She qualified with a 94. In her first match she defeated Mrs. E. H. Rogers, of Northfield, N. J., 5 and 4. Then she knocked off Mrs. M. Muller, Lake Worth, 2 and 1. Next came Mrs. Lou Miller, Hot Springs, Ark., a 2 and 1 victim. And in the finals Miss Wassell defeated Louise Williams, of Johnstown, Pa., 8 and 7.

Nassau . . .

SO MUCH HAS HAPPENED in Nassau within the past month. The death of King George VI altered both governmental and social events.

The proclamation of Elizabeth II as queen was a historic and colorful ceremony here in Nassau, capital of the Bahamas. Rawson Square was jammed with British subjects and visitors to the island. The statue of another queen—Queen Victoria—looked down on the throng that waited the arrival of His Excellency, the Governor and Mrs. Neville. The Chief Justice in his red robe and white peruke waited at the right of the Queen Victoria statue, together with the Colonial Secretary and the Provost Marshal. The Police Band, in full dress uniform, waited for the time to play "God Save The Queen," and, in double rows at stiff attention, were the police guard of honor awaiting inspection by His Excellency. Perhaps the most historic portion of the proclamation was carried out in the Legislative Council Chambers, directly behind the statue. At the doorway, His Excellency was met by an honor escort, who walked with him to the raised dais in the center of the room. Mrs. Neville was similarly escorted by the Chief Justice to a seat to the left of the dais. Then the Governor read an address on the King's life and death and the Provost Marshal stepped to the black-draped balcony and proceeded to read the Proclamation to the waiting crowd. The band struck up "God Save The Queen," the people gave three loud huzzas, and, a block away at the Prince George Wharf, two American destroyers who had stayed in port to honor the ascension of Elizabeth to the throne, boomed a 21 gun salute.

The Miami-Nassau ocean race festivities which began on February 12 and ended on the Saturday night of that week, were one of the big events of the month.

The becalming of the sailboats for several hours off Government Cut just off Miami Beach had everyone in Nassau wondering when the boats would begin to arrive here and what changes in festivities this later arrival might make.

Mr. R. T. Symonette (he is vice-commander of the Nassau Yacht Club and one of the original sponsors of the Ocean Race) gave their annual cocktail party in honor of the yachtsmen, to which were invited Nassauvians and winter visitors and residents of the island to meet the racing visitors. A big red cardboard heart decorated with white paper lace and from which a white rope held an anchor was the center of decoration which featured the St. Valentine's Day motif. The heart was broken open and in its center was a photograph of the racing scene.

On Saturday the Nassau Cup Race was held. That night the traditional presentation dinner dance was given at the Nassau Yacht Club, and this year His Excellency only appeared to make presentation of the trophies. Because of the death of the King, government entertaining and social appearance has been sharply curtailed, and this year, because of this, there was no cocktail party at Government House for the yachtsmen.

The Headdress Ball, which is an annual social event for raising funds for the Bahamas Humane Society, was changed from St. Valentine's night to the following Wednesday night at the British Colonial, since the funeral of King George was announced for Friday and the Colony felt that it would not be suitable to have a gay ball continuing far into the night and morning at such a time.

Since William Todd and his string of polo ponies are again on the island, the girls have formed a polo team. Captained by Elizabeth Todd and Sheila Pritchard, they play several times weekly at Clifford Park, the field which lies just below Fort Charlotte.

The Porcupine Club opened on January 7. Its dark red building with immaculate white trim lies just across the narrow bay that separates New Providence from Hog Island.

Nassau contributed several members of its riding set to the Miami Championship Horse Show which was held on February 1 at Dinner Key in Miami. Sir Sidney and Lady Oakes entered three mounts, Muchacha, Scotch and Soda, and Golden Arrow. George Long entered his Bantry Bay and Ann Kelley rode Golden Arrow for the Oakes. After the Miami show, the group went up to Palm Beach, where at the Lions' Club Horse Show, they walked away with several ribbons.

The black-hulled "Dubloon" from Baddock, Nova Scotia, anchored in the harbor for several days last week. This is the boat captained by Walter Boudreau, about whom the article "Yankee Clipper" appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. His novel idea of crewing his ship with people who wanted to pay for the privilege of traveling and seeing the world was the subject of the article. The ship is beautifully fitted out and is a pleasure, according to those who have crewed her, to sail.

The cruiser "Holiday," owned by DeVere Dierks, of Kansas City, Mo., laid in at the Yacht Haven for several days while he and his guest, George Rust, of Birmingham, Ala., visited in Nassau. He usually keeps his yacht in New Orleans, from which base he can take her to whichever fishing and hunting spots are most seasonable. The two were planning to fish the Bahamas around Bimini and Cat Cay after leaving Nassau.

Leland Hayward, theatrical producer of "South Pacific," stayed at the Balmoral Club for two weeks, and John Loder came down for a short stay here. Irving Berlin is reported to be back here after a hurried trip to New York, where he went for consultation with the producer and director of "Call Me Madam" about changes in the words to "I Like Ike." As yet whether or not he's revised the words to meet the current political situation, Nassau hasn't received word of it.

FORMER AMBASSADOR H. Murray-Jacoby who with Mrs. Murray-Jacoby reside at "Casa Rosada" their attractive home in Delray Beach, gave an all American program at the Palm Beach Music Study Club at the Norton Gallery of Art recently. His program included a tone poem written by Nicholas Biddle in 1824 for Charlotte Bonaparte; a piano arrangement of the late Ambassador Charles G. Dawes' composition "Melody"; and Col. Murray-Jacoby's Everglades Concerto. This was followed by a group of old American folk dances in which Col. Murray-Jacoby was assisted by Charles U. Powell, socialite harmonica virtuoso of Delray Beach. Col. Murray-Jacoby had his early musical training at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. His compositions have been featured over the principal broadcasting stations and at Carnegie Hall, Town Hall and Radio-City Music Hall in New York. He served as an Ambassador-at-Large under the Hoover Administration and in Diplomacy is considered an expert in Latin-American and Near Eastern Affairs. Mrs. Murray-Jacoby is the Vice-Regent of Delray's DAR Chapter. This is their tenth year here where they make their permanent home.

Delray Beach had a distinguished guest on February 18th in the personage of pretty 24 years old Vera Ellen, MGM dancing star who took part in the official opening of the 6th annual Gladioli Festival at which time it was estimated that 30,000 persons viewed the colorful event. Following the opening night parade, Miss Ellen was feted at a banquet.

A fashion show was given the early part of February at the Gulf Stream Polo Field, by a group of prominent young society matrons from Delray Beach, Gulf Stream and Palm Beach, between halves of the polo matches between Delray Beach and Aiken, S. C., when the entire proceeds were donated to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. The models included Mrs. Michael Phipps, Mrs. Stewart B. Iglehart, Miss Gayle Chase, Mrs. George W. Clark, Mrs. Stephen Sanford, Mrs. Persifor Frazer, 4th, Miss Carol Engel, Mrs. James Elwood Jones, Miss Klinger, Mrs. Allen Topping, Jr., Miss Barbara McMurrain, Mrs. Brown Wallace, Mrs. Bryson Seeley, Mrs. Thomas H. Shevlin, Mrs. Alfred Clark, Mrs. Donald Sharpe, Mrs. George Oliver, Mrs. William Allen and Mrs. James Howlett. A few days prior to the Delray Beach-Aiken Polo matches, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart B. Iglehart gave a barbecue at the Gulf Stream Polo Field for members of the Aiken team and their wives. The honored guests for this occasion included Mr. and Mrs. George H. (Pete) Bostwick, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Smith and Mr. Ray Harrington.

Delray Beach was again brought into the limelight recently when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Timberman became the parents of triplets. Gifts from almost every organization and many stores in Delray Beach were sent to the "wee ones." Among the gifts were three little cribs.

A number of interesting parties have been given in the Delray Beach-Gulf Stream colony during the mid-season including a cocktail party given jointly by Dr. and Mrs. Breck-

A small luncheon was also given by Gen. and Mrs. Arthur H. Carter at the Gulf Stream Golf Club in compliment to Mr. Alva B. See, a house guest of Mr. See's son-in-law and daughter Mr. and Mrs. John Holliday Perry, Jr. at "Glenlyvar" their home in Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lovejoy, of Greenwich, Conn., have arrived for a visit with Gen. and Mrs. Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Christopher Dumaine, Jr. of Boston, and Groton, Mass., came south by private car and are at MacNichol Manors. They have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Sargent who came south with them. Mr. Dumaine is President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Sage of New York are at their Delray Beach residence for the season.

Mr. Walter N. Stillman of New York City is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Noyes Wallace at their Gulf Stream home.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jay O'Brien of Spring Lake, N. J., are spending the season at their home in Gulf Stream.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. LaPorte of Waterway Lane, Delray Beach, are entertaining Mr. Morgan Reynolds, of Charlotte, N. C. They were recent hosts at a large cocktail party at the Gulf Stream Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Erret Van Nice of Chicago, Ill., arrived in mid-February to visit Mr. and Mrs. David Hugh Annan at their ocean front home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Brinkley Smithers of Locust Valley, L. I., are coming south shortly to spend several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Dunkin Smithers at "Pelican Point" their ocean front home in Delray Beach.

Mrs. Henry C. Alexander and small daughter Janet, of Katonah, N. Y., are the guests of Mrs. Lewis H. Brown in Gulf Stream. Mr. Alexander will join his family a little later in the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Pope have recently moved from their home in Gulf Stream to their new home on Seaspray Ave., Delray Beach. They were among the many Colonists who remained in Gulf Stream through the summer. Mrs. Pope's daughter, Miss Dorothy Beckwith, of Boston, Mass., is their guest for two weeks. Mrs. Pope's son, Henry, who is a freshman at Harvard, and another son Dick, who attends Milton Academy, will spend their spring vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Pope. His daughter Belinda and son Toby, who are students at Foote School, at New Haven, Conn., will also be their guests during their spring holiday. Mr. and Mrs. Pope are members of the Gulf Stream Bath and Tennis Club, the Coral Beach Club in Palm Beach, the York Country Club in Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kenworthy, of Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived in early February to spend a month at the Seagate Cabana Apartments in Gulf Stream.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Girdler of Atlanta, Ga., are visiting Mr. Girdler's parents Mr. and Mrs. Tom H. Girdler at their Gulf Stream residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stevenson have as their guests at their home on Nassau Street, Delray Beach, the former's niece, Mrs. Maud Stevenson, of Westbury, L. I. Joining them for a visit on February 15th, were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Richardson, of Charles River, Mass.

Mrs. Ruth White Baker of Delray Beach, and her house guests Mr. and Mrs. John J. White, of Greenwich, Conn., have returned from Nassau where they spent a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael S. Healy with their four daughters, Patricia, Mary Lynn, Gail, and Stephanie, and their small son, Michael, Jr. of Hinsdale, Ill., are occupying their ocean front home in Delray Beach for the season. Mr. Healy's father, Mr. Stephen A. Healy, of Hinsdale, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Healy, of La Grange, Ill., are also wintering in Delray Beach. Mr. Thomas B. Healy is a brother of Mr. Michael S. Healy.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Case, of Buffalo, N. Y., came south early this month to spend the winter at Jamaica Square. They are members of the Gulf Stream Bath and Tennis Club, and the Country, Saturn, Buffalo and Garret Clubs in Buffalo.

YACHTING ACTIVITIES in Florida inland waters are in full swing during the months of February and March, with fishing and cruising at their best, and everyone on hand for tied-up-at-the-dock entertainment, as well.

Those who make their homes afloat and the occasional cruise-takers alike have been lucky this month as an unbroken string of brilliant moonlight nights progressed, each seemingly more crystal-clear and bright than the one before. Nowhere does the moon seem to hang so low as over water; nowhere does the night-blooming jasmine have quite such a haunting fragrance as when wafted over lightly rippling waters.

Driving across the bridges between Palm Beach and the mainland, an absence of yachts from their customary docking space is noted on the best and brightest days. On one recent day, only four nautical vessels of any description were on hand at the Biltmore dock, and only a few at any of the others. Every yacht whose owner could tear himself away from the brilliant parade of sports events ashore, was cruising, fishing and enjoying the peerless, sunny weather.

The John B. Porters, whose "Sea Dream" is, indeed, a dream floating, were cruising in the vicinity of Marathon, and were fishing, of course.

The "Lark", the Delmar Kroehler's trim yacht, has been having a very busy season. Just returned from a cruise in the keys with Mr. Kenneth Koehler aboard, it is now in the Bahamas, carrying Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Koehler and guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Frances Woolard of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. William Melvin, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hughes, on board the "Sea Horse," for a cruise to Miami. The "Sea Horse" was the scene of extensive entertaining around Washington's birthday, as the Hughes, staunch Virginians, consider the birthday of their fellow Virginian akin to Christmas in importance.

Mr. and Mrs. James Melton and daughter, Margo, have chartered the Louis V. Keeler's "Karina" and are cruising in the keys.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Heermann owners of the "Clare H. IV" have as their guests for a cruise in the keys, Judge and Mrs. J. Cullen Ganey, of Philadelphia. Later the Heermann's will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Noel Marshall Seeburg with a cruise in the islands. Mrs. Heermann, a very dainty person, is Chairman of the Board of Benjamin F. Shaw Company, of Wilmington, Delaware. The ultra-feminine Mrs. Heermann presides over the fate of huge seamless steel pipes, pre-fabrication and installation.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fuller, of Philadelphia, have arrived in Palm Beach, and will be on board the "Co-Ed II" for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rand, of Stamford, Conn., are spending some time in Nassau on board their "Galaxy".

Princess de Bourbon, the former Marguerite, Princess de Danemark, is having the sails mounted to be shipped to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison F. Fleitas have been fishing nearly every day from on board their yacht "Vael". Their daughter, Connie Fleitas, thirteen years old, boated a seven foot nine inch sailfish, her first.

Miss Catherine Crowley has been going out frequently in her parent's "Thunderbird", during her stay at the Break-and Beach Club dock, with cruises to the South on the agenda.

ers, and was lucky in fastening onto two sailfish in one afternoon, recently. No. 1 sailfish was the first for Catherine, and first for the "Thunderbird" as well.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallace Smith flew in from New York City, and are doing a great deal of fishing from their "Quickstep", as are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis S. Kerr, Jr., from the decks of their "Gailew".

Mr. and Mrs. E. Preble Motley, owners of the "Whalebird", and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dingley, owners of the "Snafu II", left their yachts at the Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club dock while they flew to Jamaica for a holiday.

Out in the waters where the big sailfish play, nearly every day, have been the George W. Colemans' "Carib"; the A. S. Davies' "Faye-A-Way"; the James B. Bell, Jr.'s "Blondie" and Herbert A. Bedford's "Alex". Mr. George Scher, of Newark, N. J., and his son, have been giving the "Wilma D" a lot of exercise in the fishing grounds, as well.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Felts have arrived to spend several weeks on board their "Betsy Chatham", at the Sailfish Yacht was recently at Hobe Sound. Admiral William C. King, expected to board the yacht at Hobe Sound, was forced to cancel his trip.

Cocktails were served while cruising on board the "Clare H IV" recently, in honor of Mrs. Raymond Royce Kent and her houseguests, including Mrs. Ronnelly Thornley of Honolulu, who is visiting in Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Jewell of Falls Church, Virginia, arrived a short time ago after a cruise from Virginia aboard their "Juanita II".

Cruising in the vicinity of Miami and the keys are; Mr. and Mrs. George Williams, of New York City, on board their "Restless II", and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mele on board the "Helena". Both are season visitors at the Palm Beach Yacht Club dock.

Mrs. Daniel Braham, of Victoria, Texas and her brother, Mr. Dennis O'Connor have been doing a great deal of fishing from the decks of their "Paranda" and "Cascabelle", respectively, while on a visit in the Palm Beaches.

Washington Letter

Dear Dora:

THERE ISN'T AN AMBASSADOR IN WASHINGTON who has done more to promote friendship between his country and ours than handsome Dr. Luis Machado, of Cuba.

The first of the month Dr. Machado further hailed Cuban-American friendship by bestowing honors on an impressive list of American luminaries on behalf of Cuba's President, Dr. Carlos Prío Socarras. Awarded the Order of Military Merit were General J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; General Wade H. Haislip, Lieutenant General Charles L. Bolte, and General Harry H. Vaughan, among others. The National Order of Merit went to Ambassador Valle, of Honduras; Ambassador Castro, of El Salvador, and to the distinguished 84-year-old former senator from Pennsylvania, Senator George Wharton Pepper.

Mrs. J. Lawton Collins posed proudly for a photo with her husband; Mrs. Harry Vaughan sported a gay red hat. One of the most amusing incidents of the evening was watching columnist Drew Pearson go down that long line of brass, shaking hands with one general after the other who had come in recently for Mr. Pearson's scathing criticism.

In the fashionable group I saw Mr. and Mrs. James Purdy and Senator and Mrs. Harry Cain, both couples only recently returned from Florida. Also in the group were Mrs. Randall Hagner, former Ambassador and Mrs. William Culbertson, pretty glamour girl Dolly Corbin, and any number of representatives from Capitol Hill.

Getting right into the swim with prominent Washington hostesses is Mrs. Myron Cowen, wife of the former American Ambassador to the Philippines. Pussy willows and yellow and white spring flowers against a background of oriental treasures set the scene for the luncheon Mrs. Cowen gave recently in honor of Mrs. Arthur Radford, wife of the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet.

Among the guests, all personal friends of Mrs. Radford, were Mrs. A. Mike Monroney, wife of the Oklahoma senator; Mrs. William M. Fechteler, wife of the chief of naval operations; Mrs. Lemuel Shepherd, wife of the commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, widow of the chief justice, and Mrs. Robert L. Dennison, wife of the naval aide to the President.

The popular Kenneth Regans will just barely get moved into their new house on R Street before it is time for them to take off for the celebration at the Hotel Nacional in Cuba. A group of American senators, representatives and society people have been invited to come down (at their own expense!) for the International Horse Show and Red Ball that closes the season at the Havana Country Club, by the Cuban ambassador.

Hear that Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner have bought a house on Ocean Drive in Palm Beach and that Mrs. Gardner has gone down to do another of her expert jobs at interior decorating. Son Arthur and his recent bride spent a few days with Mrs. Gardner at Palm Beach on the way back from their honeymoon.

The Gardners' beautiful daughter, Mrs. A. Britton Browne, will not be going to Palm Beach this year as before, as the stork is expected momentarily at the Browne residence in old Georgetown.

Lovely Peggy Le Baron and her husband, who is the deputy secretary of defense for atomic energy, left for Palm Beach the beginning of the month in hopes of spending a few quiet weeks at the Villas. With all the friends they have, whether they can or not is questionable.

Another Peggy, Dresden-blond Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, wife of a former assistant attorney general, will be setting out for Florida with Roy the last week in February. They plan a cruise to the Keys on the beautiful yacht "Alva," which is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Everett E. Dickinson, of Miami Beach.

By March 1st the St. Lewises will be in Palm Beach as the house guests of Count and Countess di Castagnola, who are planning a large party in their honor on March 5th.

Peggy is one of the most energetic workers for the Republican party in Washington. She invented the much-talked-of black elephant beauty spots that were on every face, practically, at the huge GOP rally held early in the month.

It is back to Washington again for Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bruguere. They are getting settled once again in their handsome residence on New Hampshire Avenue, the former Woodbury Blair mansion. The Bruguieres plan to remain here the rest of the winter. They arrived in January from Newport, R. I.

In the late spring they departed Washington for Wakehurst, their showplace villa at the Rhode Island resort. As a summer follow-up, they went abroad, returning to Newport in time for Christmas. Their return to town means an increase in entertaining, for Mr. and Mrs. Bruguere give some of the town's most perfectly appointed parties.

Off for New York last month went Mrs. Marcella Miller

Dupont. Starred on her Gotham slate was the performance of "Cæsar and Cleopatra," which benefited the Academy of American Poets. Talented poetess, Marcy Dupont is a member and contributor. While in New York she was the guest of Mrs. Daniel Tenney.

Washington friends of Kenneth Nicoll Watson welcomed him back last week as he entertained at least 100 of his old friends at a cocktail party at his Massachusetts Avenue home. Mr. Watson came back from Europe in November, but has been spending most of the time in New York. Popular "Ken" has legal offices here as well as in New York and abroad, so will be spending more time in the capital. At Ken's party saw pretty Gloria Gilman and Mrs. James H. Gilman, both former Floridians; Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. McCeney Welch, the Cornelius Bretsches, Mrs. Kelley Ansberry, Clarence "Buzzy" Hewes, who has many friends in Palm Beach; the Newbold Walmsleys and a host of others.

The last time I talked to Rahel Davies Fitch, she had plans to leave on a wonderful flight around the world with her well-known father, Joseph E. Davies. While waiting for a propitious time to leave, Mrs. Davies-Fitch has joined her old friend Natalie Schenck in the real estate business.

Mr. and Mrs. John Oman III have been a-guesting with the Philip Kerrigans at their beautiful home (the old Whitney place) at Gulf Stream. Young-looking Mrs. Oman is the mother of four daughters. The Kerrigans are well known in Nashville and Washington, D. C. Mr. Kerrigan is quite a connoisseur of art.

Speaking of art, the Corcoran Art Gallery of Washington held a preview of the "privately owned" exhibit. Leading the "loaners" in the parade of outstanding paintings from private collections in Washington is President Truman. Item: a portrait of Benjamin Franklin presented to the President by General Charles de Gaulle in 1945.

Among those entertaining at small dinners preceding the fete at the gallery were former Ambassador and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Frank Allen West and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem. A few among the many whose art collections were shown at the gallery were Peruvian Ambassador Berckemeyer, Mrs. Dean Acheson, former Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

After a widely feted but all too brief stay, Mrs. Carveth Wells left Washington for her residence in Bermuda. The glamorous Zetta Wells is, like her husband, a world traveller, lecturer and author. While here Mrs. Wells attended the Indian Embassy reception with Mrs. Edward Campion Acheson, wife of the brother of Dean Acheson.

With her husband's cap tossed into the presidential ring, pretty, red-haired Nancy Kefauver has certainly been in the limelight. She is a busy mother of four children, but manages always to look very glamorous indeed in the party lineup or when making publicity appearances with her husband. Green is her favorite color and she makes many of her dresses herself. Although I understand Mrs. Kefauver was born in Glasgow, Scotland, she is a bona fide American citizen.

You'll be hearing from me soon, darling. All the best,

Sincerely,

GARNETT.

Palm Beach Playhouse Has Glamorous Debut

"A GREENHOUSE BECOMES A DREAM" and Palm Beach has legitimate theatre for the first time in twenty years! This is the way it happened... for years the late Ernest G. Howes had dreamed of a suitable place to present "Broadway to the resort," but it didn't materialize. Early this season his daughter Mary, star of stage, screen and radio, came to Palm Beach with the determination to carry out his wishes. She found the ideal spot!

In talking the matter over with Jim Riley, head of the Bessemer Properties Inc., who now own the historic Poinciana Hotel "greenhouse", it was decided to convert the lovely old slat house into an arena-type theatre. John Volk was called in as the architect and in five weeks, the Palm Beach Playhouse was ready for the inaugural play.

Another lucky break, was the securing of Philip Barry Jr. son of the late famous playwright Philip Barry, as producer for the project. He came to the resort, surveyed the situation and returned to New York City, to round up plays, stars and supporting casts.

"We will have an eight-week season, with a different play each week, featuring topflight stars of stage and screen and able supporting players", he said. "Palm Beach will have interesting theatre, presenting off-the-beaten-path plays, as well as some of the popular timeless dramas, including comedies, serious productions and we hope, at least one, musical."

The much-talked-about Playhouse opened to the public, the night of February 11, with as glamorous a debut as that given a Hollywood premiere. Spotlights were all over the place, flash bulbs popped, as celebrities appeared and a radio broadcast from the lobby, carried on from eight-thirty until curtain time at nine o'clock.

It was a brilliant "white tie and tails" audience, including famous international personages and prominent socialites. Glittering evening gowns and jewels, enhancing the striking theatrical setting! Every one of the five-hundred and seventy-five seats were taken, long in advance of the opening date and at least three times that number could have been sold, if they were available. It was the night Palm Beach had been waiting for!

Mrs. Cathy McNeal (right) and Mrs. Tatiana Sheedy chat during intermission. They seem pleased with the play under discussion.

While the Playhouse is modern in the nth degree, it is reminiscent of the old Greek and Roman theatres... spectators are seated on three sides, with the stage facing the fourth. A typical arena! The color scheme is developed in tones of grey... the seats are emerald green with silvered chrome. Two massive chandeliers, especially made for the place, enhance the setting and furnish dramatic illumination.

The "Poinciana Room" which includes a promenade and "Champagne Bar", carries on the old Poinciana tradition via the Franz Bueb murals in sepia, depicting scenes in and around the famous old hotel. Retaining the conservatory, which is filled with palms and tropical shrubs and plants, also helps to keep the Playhouse "traditional".

Stage settings in the modern manner, are cleverly created by Mason Arvold, a protege of the noted Robert Edmund Jones. He was the recipient of a Rockefeller Fellowship in 1923-24 for research and study in theatrical design and technique and has years of production and stage experience.

"The Animal Kingdom" by Philip Barry opened the Playhouse, starring Veronica Lake, with Peter Cookson. Both have had extensive experience in the legitimate theatre and motion pictures. The able supporting cast included: Edward Harvey; George Englund, who is also assistant director for the Playhouse; Elizabeth Wilson, Lillian Uvardy, William Adler, Winifred Cushing and Paul Crabtree, managing director, who virtually stole the show, in what "might have been" a minor role.

Crabtree has appeared on Broadway as both actor and director. In the former, he appeared in "Oklahoma", "Kiss and Tell", "Men to the Sea", "Lo and Behold", a featured role in Eugene O'Neill's, "The Iceman Cometh", for which he won seven awards. He has been directing plays for the N. Y. Theatre Guild for five years and has taken part in about twenty-five "Theatre Guild on the Air" programs.

Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" starring the glamorous Eva Gabor, was the second production...with Edward Ashley. Miss Gabor has appeared in Hollywood pictures at Paramount and Twentieth Century Fox and numerous television shows.

Mr. Ashley has starred in theatricals on three continents America, Europe and Australia, his birthplace. After three years in the U. S. Army Air Force, he returned to Broadway and Hollywood. Recently he has been featured in radio and television in New York.

After the opening night's performance, Mr. and Mrs. Messmore Kendall were hosts at a cocktail-supper at the Coral Beach Club.

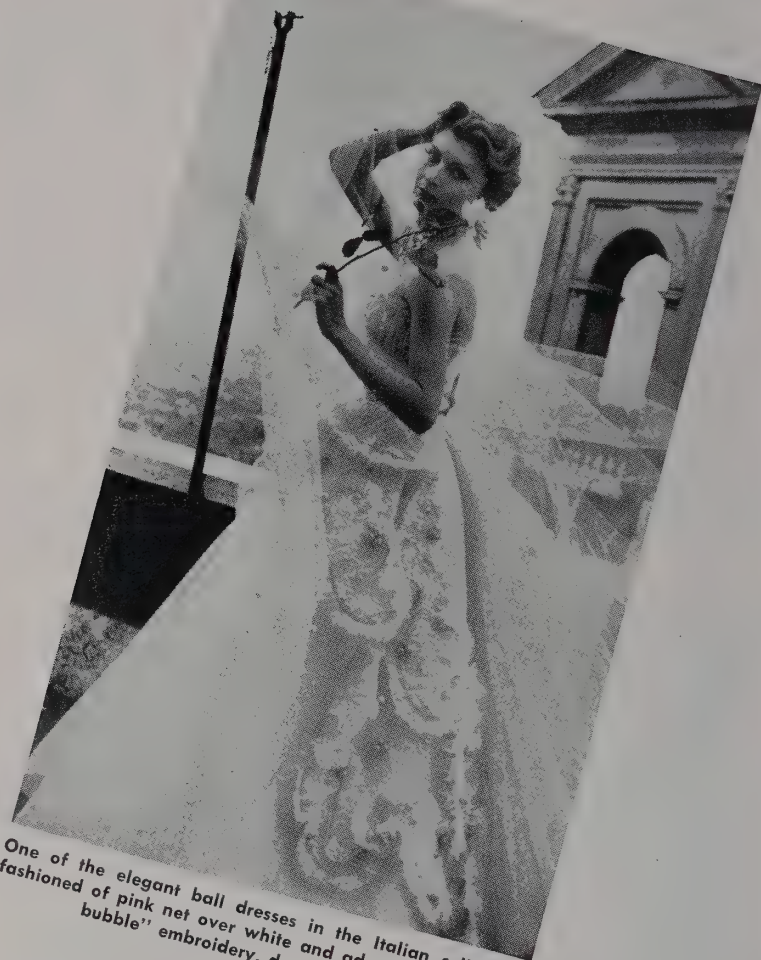

Almost curtain time and the capacity audience of Palm Beach Playhouse awaits enthusiastically for the inaugural show, "The Animal Kingdom."

Italian Aristocracy Designs Fabulous Clothes

Carmel Snow, editor of Harper's Bazaar and a noted American fashion expert, who recently visited the Rome fashion showings for spring and summer. She personally selected these photos with her impression of styles especially for the Palm Beach Life.

ITALY HAS COME TO THE FORE in fashion designing! Reports from Rome, say the Italian fashion show of 1952, is the best and most interesting ever presented by the famous couturier. Paris had better look to her laurels, as is evidenced in the accompanying illustrations of outstanding Italian creations.

The exciting collection, shown to the press and buyers in Rome, Milan and Florence, proves conclusively that Italy's bid to enter the world's fashion marts, has been universally accepted and undoubtedly will be a "sartorial shot in the arm" for international fashions.

Whoever was responsible for the tiresome platitude about Italian laziness, was certainly vastly incorrect. All of the couturiers belong to the aristocracy and these princesses and countesses are busy, successful career women, the heads of now well-known maison de couture. They work terribly hard designing, choosing materials and seldom have a chauffeur or secretary, to help with the details and "run the errands." And, according to those in the know... they just never rest over the week-end.

The only Roman aristocrat who spends a few days each week at her castle in Ninfa, is Princess Gargherita Gaetani Di Bassiano. An American by birth and she devotes her time to editing an excellent literary magazine "Botteghe Oscure" (Dark Shops). Artisans... they work hard and love it!

Fifteen days before the Paris collections, the curtain went up in Italy on the new spring and summer fashions... the third time, American buyers viewed the Italian collections. The over-all picture as usual, presented beautiful fabrics, exquisite taste, meticulous workmanship. Prices are lower in Italy than in Paris... everything brings this about; handiwork is cheaper, fabrics cost less and taxes are lighter.

Italy is a country where fine handiwork is a tradition, almost a religion. And besides, the workers have an inherited skill and fully appreciate beautiful things! An Italian woman dislikes working in a factory, but takes great pride in exquisitely embroidering a gown.

Dressmakers in Italy employ 25,000 embroideresses and this number will probably increase to 100,000 by the end of the year. Contesse Carla Garabelli Orlando, has grouped 300 deaf mutes in Rome, who have at last found balance and well-being in this occupation.

The reason that morning and evening clothes are particularly good in Italy, is that couturiers characteristically design their collections with themselves and their customer-friends in mind. These two aspects of life are preferred by Italian women, who adore to look comfortable in simple morning sports clothes and feminine in beautiful ball gowns . . . taking endless pains over faultless accessories. "In Italy, the reign of over-embroidered dresses, over-feathered hats and over-dressed ladies is over."

Surprises in the Italian style scene include . . . a new couturier, Antonio De Luca, who has a small but good collection. Madame Anna, ninety-one years old and the Dowager of Italian Couture, produced a fresh- youthful collection. Ferdinand showed more than twenty tailored suits, explaining "that in his opinion, women should wear tailleurs from dawn on."

Alberto Fabiani is of course, not a surprise, his designs are as glamorous as ever. Simonetta Visconti, Gabriellasport, Fontana, Shubert, Antonelli, are famous in Italy and abroad . . . and it is interesting to note, they have further improved. Veneziana and Mirsa have wonderful ideas for sweaters and sports clothes.

According to fashion authorities who covered the Italian openings, "There were no sensational novelties. The designers are great individualists and what's more, they know how deeply individualistic their customers are. They neither dare nor care to suddenly decree longer or shorter skirts, padded or unpadded shoulders. Nor would they dream of plotting to establish the reign of a guepiere or bouffant petticoats. They are too diplomatic to more than subtly suggest a new color. Grey for Fontana, pink for Marucelli, red and green for Fabiana, or green and black plaid for Battilocchi! They have lots of ideas and make plenty of suggestions, but it would be impossible for Italian dressmakers to force things on Italian women . . . or Italian women to stand for them."

Italians are supreme when they make bags, gloves and shoes. The Italian fabrics always wonderful, show a special effort has been made this year, to produce the epitome of texture, design and color, including tweeds, which are among the finest in the world. An innate sense of color seems to have been handed down by generations of artists. Italy's most common product straw, is used for very extravagant ball gowns and nowhere else, can one find more "delectable" organzas or finer silk shantung.

The "ball gowns" are mostly bouffant . . . the debutante's dream come true. And, when you have visited an Italian palace and seen suites of gorgeously decorated reception rooms, you realize that such a setting practically gave birth to these romantic models. With inexpensive handiwork and skilled workers galore, Italy can afford to lavish embroidery and lace on these ephemeral works of art.

"Rome", according to the American editors and buyers, who were there for the spring and summer fashion collections, "is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. And, perhaps the only one, where you can chat with everyone about anything and be sure of witty repartee, whether the conversation is about art, literature or fox hunting."

Attracts Worldwide Interest

Down to the sea, in the Italian manner . . . bra-type halter, brief, tight-fitting pants and overskirt. In yellow and black striped silk; black skirt and sandals.

Rome's smiling hospitality and charm, is so perfectly expressed in its social life . . . and these attributes are echoed in the clothes designed by smart Italian couture. Clothes that are style-right and beautiful, for every occasion!

The gracious hospitality was shown in a dinner party given at the "Open Gate Club" (very smart) for Carmel Snow, editor of Harper's Bazaar. And another, hosted by Conte and Contessa Crespi. Both assembled dazzling women and brilliant men, whose names and jewels were equally historical. One noted for instance, the pearls given by Louis XIV to his first love, Maria Mancini . . . the profile of an Emperor . . . and on and on!

At luncheons, to which Roman beauties drove in tiny cars, which reminded one of mice, the popular costume was the simplest black suit and no jewelry at all. But still . . . they had their profiles and that was breath-taking enough, commented the Americans. Adding, "Italian women are as beautiful as flowers and with about as much effort . . . flowers don't try to look pretty."

Pink polka dots on a black silk background. The bodice has a short basque about three inches below waistline. Narrow belt is of self-material.

They were equally enthusiastic about the spectacular Roman sunsets, that flushed the ancient walls, a rose red. And, the ringing of church bells . . . "like an orchestra in a velvety sky".

No wonder the Italian clothes are so smart, romantic, colorful and interesting!

Black shiny straw material is used entirely for this elaborate evening gown. A huge black taffeta bow accenting fitted bodice, is an interesting contrast.

WHITE MINK: One of the season's most important furs! The V-contoured placement of the skins is style news . . . also the tiny-waisted styling, in clever manipulation. From the spring collection of Leo Ritter of Ritter Bros. Dolman sleeves for comfort and chic!

Blue and white silk print halter dress, that looks completely covered up, via the brief bolero. The full skirt is nipped at the waistline by a tapered, shaped belt.
From the resort and early spring collection of Nettie Rosenstein and at Mme. Mogabgab's in Palm Beach.

From the "Heavenly Body" collection of Cole of California and available at Norman's. The swim suit of magic Matletex, features flattering shirred detail. Matching "cinch" coat with Peter Pan collar and tie-front belt. In rarefied blue, sunset coral, purple petal.

Flare-skirted princess-line swim suit, of Laton-faille with separate matching briefs, by Surf Togs. The cuffed and tucked bra, is an interesting style note. Finchley's has this in lime, black, violet and aqua.

FEATHERWEIGHT COTTON in primitive designs and colors, is the medium for this smart sunback dress with matching stole, which may be worn over the head or around the shoulders. From the resort collection at Herman's . . . built-in-bra are featured in all of their flattering clothes.

DIAMOND ACCESSORIES by Koslow to accent your strapless evening gown. The three-strand necklace and dangling ear clips, feature round diamonds and pear-shaped drops, in the same effective design. The brilliant pear-shaped ring complements the striking ensemble. For added glamour, a bracelet of unique design in round and baguette diamonds.

LEMON YELLOW LACE, is the medium for this smart and very feminine cocktail-dinner dress. Note the airy, puffed sleeves, from an extended shoulder; molded bodice with low decolletage; beautifully flared skirt. A rhinestone cluster adds glitter and interest. Designed by Jo Copeland and available at Saks Fifth Avenue.

FOR COCKTAILS and on to dinner! This fascinating creation by Jo Copeland of Pattullo, included in the collection at Saks Fifth Avenue. Shaped cut-outs faced with pleated white net, produce a graduating tiered effect for the skirt of navy blue silk taffeta. Repeated at the halter neckline, finished with side-jutting tabs.

Scouting the Shops

"CINNAMON DIAMOND": Brown is an important fashion color this year. Greenleaf & Crosby's diamond collection includes a unique "cinnamon diamond" ring of emerald cut, set in platinum and accented with baguettes. Other chic "finger decoration" . . . large star sapphires. All settings very modern and unusually artistic!

"LITTLE CHIFFONS": That go to cocktails and on to dinner . . . interpreted by Christian Dior, Maurice Rentner, Traina-Norell, Pauline Trigere and available in a diverse collection at Razook's, in The Breakers. Casual clothes here are equally individual . . . linens and cottons, in distinctive designs and clever color mergers.

IMPORTANT ACCESSORY: The final touch to a well-groomed appearance . . . your favorite perfume! The Everglades Pharmacy's array of imported and domestic fragrances, is among the most comprehensive in the resort.

"MIX OR MATCH MATES": Fashioned of the famous Tootal linen, Ruth Chagnon suggests the meticulously tailored skirts of "pencil lines," teamed with blouses of the same fabric, either matched or contrasted in color, for general resort wear and the north, come summer. The "toppings" have short sleeves and flattering little Peter Pan collars.

"AROUND THE WORLD": In outstanding crafts and gathered under one roof in segregated array, for interesting study . . . at Worldcraft Inc. A wonderful find for the collector; items from all over the globe.

"LINEN IN THE LIMELIGHT": For daytime and evening . . . Anthony's sunbacks with companion boleros, in pastels, navy and black, designed of Tootal linen, are the last word in chic. The one-piecers (sleeveless and short sleeves) to be topped with matching cashmere cardigans or wool "little coats," are also a must for well-planned resort wardrobes.

ANTIQUE AND MODERN: There is a trend toward antique jewels in the spring style notes . . . so dust off your old tiaras and amethysts that grandmother wore and you'll be definitely 1952. Marcus Inc. have a fabulous collection of distinctive antique jewelry. And, if you don't go for that . . . their modern pieces, featuring diamonds, are the smart answer.

"TABLE TALK": Regardless of your choice in "table accessories and appointments," the Wm. H. Plummer shop of New York and Palm Beach, noted for years, for the best in china and glass, have the correct solution . . . rare antiques and smart modern pieces; equally fascinating.

PROVINCIAL AND CONTEMPORARY: Furniture are included in the extensive selection at Worrell's, who are also consultants in interior decorating; they have decorated many of the important homes in the resort.

EMPRESS JOSEPHINE: Isn't it too bad that the hand lotion named for this noted historical character, wasn't available for her! The International Research Laboratories claim "If Josephine had known, she would have used it too."

OPULENCE THE KEYNOTE: Of Martha's collection, featuring topflight American designers and her own originals. She believes clothes should flatter a woman and chooses her fabulous collections accordingly. Also, the accessories!

MUSEUM-LIKE SHOP: "Treasures & Trifles" is full of museum pieces . . . large and small and all interesting. Rare items to delight the collector and grand gift ideas. Even the trifles become treasures here, if you know and appreciate unusual things.

TO ADD DAZZLE: To your evening costumes, the gorgeous diamond necklaces, earrings, bracelets and such, at L. Barton Brookov. The pieces are modern and intricate in design . . . fascinating new designs!

WORLD-WOODS: From the Belgian Congo to South American primavera . . . woods from all over the world, are used by the Manor Industries to fashion their custom-made pieces. Japan, Java and Sumatra, also are included in the "wood picture" for the exclusive tables, chairs, beds, etc.

A BEAUTIFUL SETTING: Is based on a good permanent, claims Elizabeth Arden . . . previous to this, the hair is shaped and tapered, to the most becoming line to you. Next a conditioning shampoo and then . . . the permanent. Finally, the styling and setting, as individual as your signature!

FOREIGN AND SMART: The Jaguar Mark VII, drophead . . . among the smart foreign cars at the Palm Beach Foreign Motors Inc. Clever color jobs and unique lines.

DIAMONDS AND RUBIES: Combine effectively in a superb necklace by Cartier . . . round diamonds for the choker necklace and baguettes and round stones, highlighted with rubies for the large leaf-like pendants. Harmonizing earrings for added brilliance!

DISTINCTIVE LINENS: For the table, boudoir, bathroom . . . Mosley's are noted for fine linens. Imported and domestic versions, tailored and embellished with lace or embroidery; white, pastels and "high colors," to harmonize with the rooms.

HISTORICAL JEWELS: Harry Winston, has some of the world's most famous historical diamonds. "Adventures in Winstonland" also include fabulous modern pieces, made in their New York workrooms . . . dramatic glitter to enhance cocktail and evening clothes.

MILITARY INFLUENCE: Fitted coats are considered smart in the spring style picture. An outstanding interpretation in the Frances Brewster collection, features the military influence, finished with brass buttons. In a recent fashion show, this was teamed with a tattersal-checked golfer and the famous Brewster visor-hat.

KOREAN CHEST: Among the rare antiques at Patricia Holsaert's . . . it pre-dates the Chinese things and is in wonderful condition; finished with brass butterfly hinges. Traditional furniture, custom-made by a fine New England cabinetmaker and contemporary pieces are both featured.

GLAMOROUS BALL GOWN from the resort collection of Milmont and included in McDonald's evening gown collection. Fashioned of white net and white lace, the long torso bodice merges these two fabrics in an effective applied styling. The billowing skirt of the white net is completely pleated.

Civil Air Patrol Protects Resort

Instructing a class of Civil Air Patrol cadets, as part of their official obligations to the United States Air Force, are Major Stanley Abramson, Lieut. R. K. McEwen, O.D., an Air Force instructor and cadets of the Palm Beach County Squadron, CAP. The cadets are receiving briefing in fire-spotting technique.

OUT IN THE VAST REACHES of the Everglades many hunters and "frogmen" become lost, or helpless because of stalled vehicles each year. In the seemingly endless stretches of marsh land and sawgrass light planes traversing the southern portion of Florida, too, are sometimes lost miles from the nearest civilization. In years past these mishaps often meant men lost forever; dead from starvation, exposure or untended wounds. Rescue by stray Indians was rare and often search parties setting out by ground transportation to look for lost persons themselves became lost, compounding tragedy.

It was to help in emergencies of this kind that the Palm Beach County Squadron, Civil Air Patrol, was re-activated a little over two years ago. Although they fill many functions of greater importance from a national standpoint, it is for their SAR-CAP (Search and Rescue, Civil Air Patrol) operations that local and visiting sportsmen rise up and call the members of the squadron blessed.

First organized seven days before Pearl Harbor, the local Civil Air Patrol activities were sparked by such sports notables as: Briggs S. Cunningham, Emerson H. "Rusty" Gates, Adam G. "Tommy" Thompson, Zack Moseley of "Smilin' Jack" fame, Col. Tom Smith, Judge Richard P. Robbins, Wiley R. Reynolds Jr., Ralph Cohn, M. E. "Doc" Rinker, Col. Wright "Ike" Vermilya, Major Wesley B. Jackson and Ben York.

At first the local Civil Air Patrol unit, believed to have been the second in the entire United States, was organized from a group of flying enthusiasts banded together for civil defense purposes in the growing war threat. In the uneasy days immediately preceeding World War II the coast of Florida, and especially Palm Beach County, jutting out toward a major sea lane, appeared to these far-sighted men to be a danger spot in the defense of our country and its shipping.

The first CAP planes were the private pleasure craft of the sportsmen pilots, and the pilots were entirely on their own, with no government backing or protection. They were able to get extra supplies of gasoline, after gasoline rationing went into effect, for their patrol work, but none for pleasure trips. When war was declared and enemy subs began their bitter-end assault upon American and neutral shipping, the pilots were out in their frail craft in all kinds of weather, with no remuneration and very little consideration, either official or non-official. The public, as far as it knew about their work, was grateful, but both the government and the public were far too concerned with weightier matters to pay much attention to a few men patrolling the important sea lane past the coast of Florida.

Members of the group had been petitioning Washington for permission to carry bombs, to no avail, when a plane piloted by M. E. "Doc" Rinker, on patrol, spotted an enemy sub, surfaced, off Cape Canaveral. The surfaced sub was a perfect target, but the little plane carried no ammunition, and all Mr. Rinker and his observer could do was circle the spot, practically flapping the plane's wings in frustrated rage. They had radioed the nearest air base, but the sub was lost before a military plane could arrive, and was left intact to prey on important shipments of war material traversing the innocent appearing offshore waters.

Civil Air Patrol enthusiasts gathered at Palm Beach International Airport are, left to right: Major Stanley Abramson, Commanding Officer of Palm Beach County Squadron; radio and screen stars Frances Langford and Jon Hall; Zack Moseley, creator of "Smilin' Jack"; (back to camera) John H. Perry, owner of Palm Beach Daily News and Palm Beach Life and Mrs. Moseley.

After this incident, permission to carry bombs, and bombs to carry were granted the local CAP in short order. At first, fifty-pound bombs were tied to the undersides of plane wings with ropes. Stinson and other pleasure planes became deadly missile carriers. As a rule, two men, a pilot and observer, went out in each plane, and the planes traveled in pairs. If a sub was sighted, the pilot held his plane as steady as possible, while his companion climbed out to where he could cut the ropes holding their bombs.

The fact that patrol was being maintained had the effect of deterring enemy subs, to some extent, in their bold behavior, as the incident just off the beach at Melbourne, before any bombs could arrive for CAP planes to carry. One of the local patrol planes spotted a sub just getting to the surface in the middle of a convoy of three slow tankers. The little plane, completely unarmed, dove repeatedly at the surfacing sub until the sub apparently decided against attacking. After the sub had been driven off by nothing but sheer audacity, the plane circled over the tankers as long as its gas supply held out, saving them from certain attack.

After bombs arrived, a CAP plane from the Palm Beaches attacked an enemy sub twenty-two miles northeast of Vero Beach, causing it to submerge. The plane then dropped its bombs where the sub was last seen, with the satisfaction of seeing an oil slick and debris appear in short order. Although never given credit for a "kill", the probability that one was made on this occasion is very strong.

In another engagement eight miles off the inlet at Stuart, a local plane, on patrol at dawn, caused a surfaced sub to crash dive, and after dropping its bomb load on the sub's course, flew away. Later it was rumored that the 1st Bomber Command, in Miami, gave credit for a direct hit to the CAP plane in this exploit. On this occasion two planes had gone out together, but had become separated. The plane doing the bombing was on its way back from West End, and very low on gasoline.

As World War II progressed, members of the CAP were put on an official basis, with gasoline and plane maintenance paid, and a small salary. The end of the war emergency, however, saw the program abandoned.

In December, 1949, the Palm Beach County Squadron of Civil Air Patrol was re-activated and placed on semi-official footing. Under a chain of command starting at Bolling Field, in Washington, where Major General Lucius Beau, USAF, is Commanding Officer of the CAP, and continuing through the Florida Wing, with headquarters at Orlando, Palm Beach County Squadron is a part of Group 5, with group headquarters in Lantana.

Nationally chartered, the local squadron is primarily responsible to the United States Air Force, and is an auxiliary of the Air Force by Act of Congress. The squadron is responsible, also, to any nationally recognized relief organization, as the American Red Cross, for emergency duty.

Part of the Civil Air Patrol units' responsibility to the Air Force is to provide cadet training to insure a supply of future pilots and navigators. The Palm Beach County Squadron maintains a cadet corps of boys and girls from fifteen to eighteen years of age who are air-minded. This squadron had the pleasure, last year, of seeing one of its cadets, Jerry Woods, picked as one of the two outstanding cadets in the state of Florida, for a trip to Canada as part of the International Cadet Training program. The squadron also entertained five cadets from Portuguese Civil Air Patrol.

The youngsters enrolled in cadet training are instructed in all phases of aeronautics in regular classes held at Palm Beach International Airport, and given orientation flights in the private planes of senior members of the squadron. The senior members are themselves constantly taking advanced training in subjects related to Air Force work.

In the field of Search and Rescue the Palm Beach County Squadron has earned the undying gratitude of sportsmen and their families for its conscientious study of rescue technique. The members' training in the use of flares, message drops, ground panel signals, message pick-up from the ground, mirror and fire signals and ground-air coordination has prepared them for emergency duty of a kind filled by no other organization.

Recently two men adrift in a boat on Lake Okeechobee during an ill-fated fishing trip were rescued when a CAP plane spotted their boat and radioed surface rescue parties in time to save the lives of both men.

Flying over the Atlantic on patrol, off the coast of Palm Beach is Palm Beach County Squadron official CPA plane, a 200hp. Fairchild PT-26. The plane is used in SAR-CAP (Search and Rescue, Civil Air Patrol) operations, fire-spotting and in case of national emergency, would supplement the regular Air Force in patrol work.

The Montego Bay airport is to be brought up to international standards by improved extensions in order to make it a first-class air stop capable of accommodating modern Stratocruisers and jet-propelled planes.

LITTLE SPANISH TOWN

Via Mizner and Via Parigi

PALM BEACHERS of many years standing find, in a rapidly changing world, one little cove of unchanging tranquility when they turn from Worth Avenue or Peruvian into the "little Spanish town" of Via Mizner and Via Parigi.

It was only twenty-nine years ago that Addison Mizner, dean of Palm Beach architects and craftsman extraordinaire decided that he would build a residence suitable to live in, yet expressing the best of the Mediterranean architecture he admired so much. Via Mizner's east courtyard is the plaza of the old Mizner home, and No. 3, Via Mizner was the entrance of the owner's home. A visitor wandering the tiny twisted streets today, however, finds it hard to believe that this bit of Old Spain is really so young, as towns and houses go.

The present little shopping center was not planned in its entirety, but grew with the needs and desires of Palm Beach. A portion of the residence and several offices were built first, and as Palm Beach grew, so grew Via Mizner and Via Parigi, with shops, offices and apartments added, each in accordance with changing ideas and customs, but each keeping the original form. Shops were even built to fit a particular tenant's needs. After the ground floor was taken up, other stories were added above, accounting for the arches overhead, allowing passage below and simultaneously supporting the quarters above.

In Spain, where Addison Mizner spent the greater part of his youth, he found that from the largest city to the smallest village or country house, the architectural scheme was for the primary purpose of protection. Building all the houses of a village around a central courtyard and presenting windowless backs of the buildings to the open terrain through which invading armies might come was a measure of protection, and a very necessary one in a land invaded again and again by foreign foe and native feudal lords.

Cities and villages clustered, in Spain, around the tallest structure, which was usually the church or residence of the nobleza. At the very top of the tallest structure was a lookout, where keepers of the watch could spot an approaching foe and warn their village. The large, open courtyard with its tinkling fountain was not only a fiesta-day gathering place for peasantry, but an inner core of protected territory for the women and children in time of invasion.

Even if an invader penetrated the Spanish town, past the outer walls, he could still be ambushed in the narrow, twisting streets, before he reached the inner courtyard. Such, on a smaller scale, is the theme of Vias Mizner and Parigi.

What are now shops and offices in the vias would have been quarters for the nobleman's soldiers and guards, as well as stables, in the old country. On the next landing, up twisting little staircases, would have been the servants quarters. On the premier floor would have been the apartments of the noble, his family and guests. Addison Mizner

The beautiful terraced entrance to Addison Mizner's Spanish Castle, No. 3 Via Mizner, as seen by artist John Wentworth Dillon.

A palm and bougainvillea enframed archway in Via Parigi showing the delicate ironwork of a balcony, the heavy beams, wood-framed casement windows and art work typical of the little shopping center.

so used the most favorable and picturesque portion of his old-world creation. Towering over all else above Vias Mizner and Parigi is the Miradore, a replica of the Spanish watch tower, used by Mr. Mizner as his study.

In any other climate, the extremely Spanish theme of the Mizner creation would seem garish and artificial, but in sub-tropical Palm Beach there is nothing incongruous, or jarring to the sensibilities in stepping from ultra-smart Worth Avenue into quaint Via Mizner. Good taste and careful planning have kept Palm Beach from suffering sharp contrasts side by side, and a beneficent nature has provided the sunshine, azure skies and sub-tropical landscape material to background a universal Mediterranean atmosphere.

From the Miradore, with its window walls, down, Vias Mizner and Parigi, and their shouldering buildings, are a rhythm in perfect blending of the creations of man and nature. Sun and rain have blended the red color of the myriad different-height roofs into a symphony with moss and lichens, until there is a mass of light and shade with the dull tint of red beneath. The bright sun shining on a portion of roof produces breathtaking beauty of line and color. There are few views in Palm Beach to equal that from the Miradore.

Huge San Juan doors, imported from Spain, with a wicket, or small door for pedestrians, mark the entrance to Via Mizner's plaza. Within the plaza are the Generalife, or lion's mouth pots from Granada, tinijas, or wine jars, and the original sixteenth century fountain head and ornaments from Spain. Water tinkles through the mouth of the fountainhead under the shelter of a ponderous fig tree, unusual even in Palm Beach. Potted ferns, crotons and ixoras outline the multi-cornered passages, with here and there a melaleuca, bougainvillea and lantana growing out of carefully cultivated soil, to add their shade in the dappled patterns. On the walls a faded mural or leaded window pane takes on sharper color as the shadows creep across its face.

Along the winding walks themselves, signs of all sizes and shapes proclaim shops intriguingly windowed, displaying wares of every description, from original gowns in the very latest mode to antique china and glassware of irresistible beauty. A cocktail loggia, a sheltered little restaurant behind a hedge of potted plants and the severe note of an auditing office contrast centuries with the window where a lady sits looming cloth as it was loomed two hundred years ago.

Evolving with the growth of Palm Beach and containing all modern improvements, Via Mizner and Via Parigi still retain within the heart of a modern town the haunting beauty of ancient Spain. Few can walk these little streets, smell the autumnal tang of woodsmoke that rises from the chimney-pots on a cool day, and not feel that modernity has melted away as the mist, just for a little while.

Luxurious tropical foliage in the patio of Via Parigi. This sketch by John Wentworth Dillon catches perfectly the marketplace atmosphere in the center of Mizner's Spanish village.

Old Masters Set Motif in Painting

"MOTIF IN PAINTING," the title of an art exhibition just now current at the Norton Gallery of Art carries with it the intention to show how painting produced four centuries ago may still appeal to us today because of its motif—the artist's ability to design his canvas, and according to Willis F. Woods, director of the Norton Gallery and School of Art, "his lifting of the subject out of the specific into generalizations which have lasting significance and which lead to the artistic value of the work."

A collection that for the most part comprises Old Masters—Lucas Cranach, The Elder, Luca Giordano, and artists of the German, Italian, French, Venetian, Flemish and Spanish, schools of painting there is included work by the French Impressionists, Claude Monet and Camille Pissarro and the noted French master, Gauguin.

An exhibition lent through kindness of the E. and A. Silberman Galleries, Inc., of New York, the canvases were selected by Mr. Woods with the intention of presenting an insight into the motif of painting, and he explains that whereas we think of the term "motif" as pertaining to "pattern or device, and the dominant theme in music, in painting, usage of the word indicates the controlling idea or element which affects the decision of the artist in every part of the canvas.

As an example, in a painting entitled "The Sepulchre," one senses tragedy of great finality as the dominant motif, is carried out in every detail in the slumping of the figures and sagging of the robes, the wealth of color becoming secondary to the theme of the painting.

In like manner in "The Betrayal of Christ," a painting of treachery, by Lucas Cranach, The Elder there is reflected in all parts of the canvas ominousness and faithlessness.

In contrast, a composition of "Virgin and Child" by a Master of Frankfort is serene, even to the turn of the hands of the young mother tenderly enfolding her child, the entire arrangement of the painting a testament of composure.

Thus is seen the controlling motif which brings to other elements of the picture the spiritual and emotional qualities contributed by both artist and subject.

In a portrayal of an elegant Spanish cavalier, "Portrait of Youth," from the Circle of Velasques the viewer is made to feel what the artist felt—for it is evident in jauntiness of the painting the turn of the cavalier's epaulets, the boastful smirk on his face, the flip of his hand, that he represents one who feels superior.

A very courtly picture, it reflects the technique of Velasquez who maintained a very large studio and with whom many fine painters were associated among them Juan Bautista del Maza and Juan de Pareja.

Velasquez, made grand marshal of the palace of Philip IV of Spain became a chronicler of the life at the court of Madrid and thus influenced his pupils in the direction of grandiose portrayal.

So it is we see here the magic power of painting which is able to move the beholder as deeply by means of what is ugly, and even repugnant, as by what is pleasing, and beautiful.

"The Betrayal of Christ," by Lucas Cranach, The Elder, German (1472-1553).

In a presental of art of the Church, one views diverse feelings with respect to the portrayal of St. Anthony. In a portrait by Girolamo Del Pacchia, a Sienese artist (1477-1535) the famous saint is portrayed as ancient and venerable, bespectacled and with cane for support—a picture that arouses reverence for the wisdom of age. In the other by a Master of the School of Avignon adorning one door of a small reliquary, we see St. Anthony as a young man, his simple robes and benign expression, revealing a youth who is destined to become a Prince of the Church.

Considerable diversity exists in the collection, its paintings showing how attitudes have changed in a wide space of time. For example from those of the Middle Rhenish Masters, appealing in their sympathetic pattern, the collection spans four hundred years to the Impressionists with "Bridge at Argenteuil," by Monet and Camille Pissarro's "View Of Osny near Pontoise."

"Finding of the Infant Moses," by Paolo Veronese, Venetian (1528-1588).

"Virgin and Child," by a Master of Frankfurt (1500-1520) German.

Among the old masters of modern painting, there is viewed in these examples the values of feelings and expressions for, and of nature, which is what the Impressionists sought in their struggle against the classical school. Thus the gallery goer to this exhibition may enrich his feeling for art, and gain a wider knowledge of "the spiritual and emotional qualities contributed by both artist and subject," as Mr. Woods so well explains in the show's catalogue.

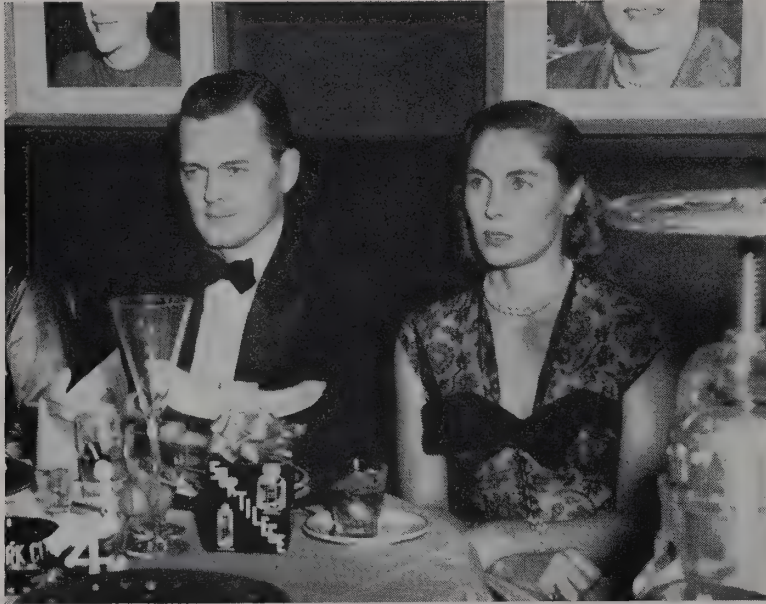

Writing from point of view of one long associated with the subject, the Norton Gallery director tells us:

"The artist, working in a state of heightened sensibility, analyzes his subject for its structural possibilities and characteristic features. Somewhere in this process an idea emerges. Although it is all part of his feeling about his task, there is something he wants to say. This idea dominates all stages of the work and every part of the completed product. Because we today are still excited by the mysteries, truths, and relationships of man and his universe, we can respond to the beautiful expressions created by the special insight of the artist.

"Considerable diversity exists in this group. We were guided by the characteristic impact of a picture, rather than by a search for exemplary types. Despite the difficulty in organization which this disparity occasions, we are free, on the other hand, to point out certain features which are shared by paintings, irrespective of type, which may in some small measure help us understand our enjoyment of pictures.

"The paintings on view have as their subjects saints and ordinary men, events, legends, and scenes. We realize, in the wide space of time involved here, that attitudes have changed. Although man is usually the center of interest, the early tentative use of landscape eventually develops into its presentation as an independent subject. In a cursory fashion we go through the secularization of western art. This exhibition, however, is not an attempt to restudy these already well-known phenomena."

New York Letter

Dear Dora:

How I envy you. Basking in sun-drenched patios and bathing in azure-tinted pools. Oh, for the luxurious life of an elegant beachcomber in Palm Beach! But nevertheless, New York's social whirl is increasingly gay and couldn't be more glamorous.

I lunched with mutual friends only the other day at 21, and whom should I run into but Neddie McLean's glamorous brunette wife. I heard she had come up from Palm Beach alone and that there is gossip of a possible estrangement. I'm sure there's nothing to it, because the last time I saw them together they couldn't have looked more devoted.

I'm told that Bob Sweeny is suffering from a severe case of ulcers. Now really, my dear, what would Bob have on his mind that would cause an ulcer, unless he's worried he might speak to the wrong person. Someone, should I say, who isn't quite social enough to be included in the small coterie in which Mr. Sweeny travels.

Mrs. Robert Sweeny, Count Vasili Alderberg and Mrs. John Sims Kelly, (Brenda Frazier) arrive at The Plaza for a recent ball.

And speaking of Palm Beach personalities, I was told the Windsors would start for Palm Beach as soon as David returns from England. Doubtlessly they will again stay with Bob and Anita Young, but I am certain all parties planned will be cancelled. He, naturally, will be in mourning and, since his reconciliation with the royal family, will feel his responsibility even greater.

Vava Alderberg is carrying the torch for Brenda Frazier, who has departed for Italy to join her newest beau, Piero Mele. The latest on Sylvia and Clark Gable has them patching up their differences in Sylvia's room at Doctors' Hospital. Wouldn't it be amazing if they decided to make a fresh start. Oh, well, such is life in the upper stratus. Sylvia, you know, was in a motor accident at Nassau, and escaped with a fractured ankle. She came directly here, and Clark, who came on from the coast, has either seen or spoken with her every day.

Will you please tell me what goes on with Gary and Rocky Cooper? Are they or aren't they? I understand Rocky recently joined Gary at the penthouse apartment of her parents, the Paul Shields, at Brazilian Court. They have dined together publicly, but lately Gary has been seen with Kay Topping. I suppose Kay is more or less at loose ends now that Tony Pulitzer is in Spain. But do let me know what goes on. You should have a ringside seat to what may prove a most interesting match, and I don't mean boxing.

A recent highlight of the social world was the Leap Year Costume Ball held at the Waldorf on the 29th. Many of New York's most eligible attended. Johnny Jelke flew up from Acapulco especially to attend. And other well-known cafe socialites were Jay Rossbach, Maurice Carrere, Tony Veiga and John Alden Talbot, Jr. Believe me, it was quite a performance.

Norman Armour, Jr., of the meat-packing family is expected to marry Cynthia Paine as soon as she receives her divorce from Augustus. Jean Schley Rhinelandier will go to the Virgin Islands to begin divorce proceedings against Oakley. They tried a reconciliation, but I'm afraid it didn't work. It's really too bad, because two nicer people I've never known.

I heard that Neddie McLean's brother, Jock, is straying with a well-known blonde in Palm Beach. Do you suppose that is why his lovely wife is spending so much time in Texas this winter? Why is it the McLean boys have so much difficulty keeping an even keel in matrimonial seas? At their age they should realize they're not playboys and settle down and behave like husbands. Are they still part of the Patio decor at Palm Beach? When I was there last year, I never went to the Patio without bumping into one, and more so than not, both McLeans.

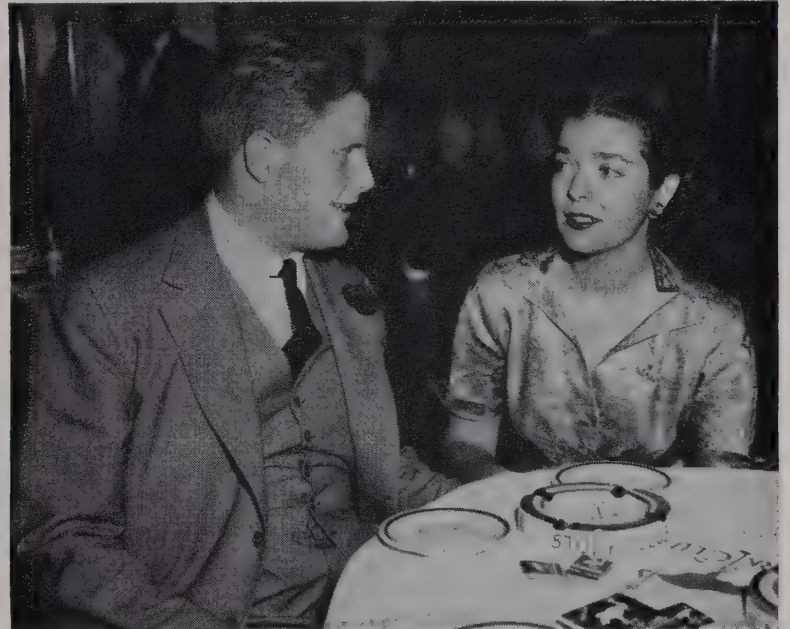

At the theatre the other evening I sat behind an acquaintance whom I mistook for someone else. I called out the name I thought belonged to the person and was informed in a most chilly manner of my mistake. After apologizing profusely, I suddenly remembered the proper name of the fellow, and we struck up quite a conversation. It seems he had just returned from Palm Beach, where he had seen several mutual friends. He explained parties were small this year because the entertainers and caterers had jacked up their prices. Thus your cottage colonists were giving smaller dinners and using their own servants. Guessing games took the place of music and singing, and now it appears the caterers are weeping into their beards. If they hadn't been so greedy to begin with they wouldn't have to worry where their next party is coming from.

Loads of love,

Ellen.

AMONG THE PALMS

The Brazilian Court

GUESTS IN THE DELIGHTFUL home-away-from-home atmosphere of the Brazilian Court Hotel have no weather worries. Within the hotel three different interior lounges offer temperatures ranging from outdoors to the warmth of a big wood-burning fireplace in the middle lounge. Out of doors is the famous central court, where guests may sit in the shade at umbrella-covered tables, or soak up the Florida sunshine, all the while surrounded by exotic varieties of tropical foliage.

Among guests enjoying the splendid service and warm hospitality of the Brazilian Court this season are: Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin M. May, of Greenville, Del.; Mrs. Thomas C. Werbe, of Anderson, Ind.; Mr. Lester Dodge of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Moyle, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Koss, of Des Moines, Iowa, who have joined his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Koss; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Skinner, of Birmingham, Mich., and Mr. Frank Righeimer, of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis O'Connor, of Victoria, Texas, are spending some time at the Brazilian Court, as are Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Anderson, of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Peyton, who have returned from Nassau; Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd Stone, of Peoria, Ill., and Mrs. Stone's mother, Mrs. Edgar A. Higgins, of Omaha, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Crock, of Greensburg, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Post, of Westwood, N. J.;

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Deegan, of Old Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. Calvin Bullock, of New York.

A visitor from Paris, Mr. Harrison Chauncey, has arrived at Brazilian Court. Also from abroad is Mrs. G. Moray Stephenson, of London, who has joined her mother, Mrs. W. H. Sinnock, and her brother, Mr. J. W. Sinnock, of Quincy, Ill. Miss Jessie Smith has arrived from New York, as have Mr. and Mrs. John D. McMaster.

The Villas

Guests at the smart Villas Hotel number many who are spending the entire season, as well as those taking advantage of the Villas close proximity to shopping centers, beach and night spots.

Among Villas guests this season are Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Murray, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Elisha C. Cooper, of New Britain, Conn., who came over from Jamaica to spend the season; Mrs. Church Merrill, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Cedric A. Major, of New York, and Mrs. C. B. Freeman, also of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Igoe and daughter, Miss Jo Anne Igoe, of Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Ann Schuster and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sauer, all of Manhattan.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Le Baron, of Washington, D. C., are staying at the Villas for several weeks. He is chief deputy to the secretary of defense for atomic energy. Other guests are Mr. Harry Payne, of Forest Hills, Long Island, and Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Lee, of Laytonsville, Md., who have joined her parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Conley.

Here in the luxuriant tropical patio of the Brazilian Court, one senses the world-famous charm of Florida's alluring East Coast. Sheltered from the sun by gay umbrellas, one may enjoy luncheon or dinner in this floral garden to the music of the ubiquitous mocking bird or the brilliant cardinal as they sing from high in the palm fronds, while dinner guests are served under twinkling stars in the scented air of the blossoming jasmine.

The Ambassador

AT THE AMBASSADOR HOTEL where Manager Larry Borsten makes a study of that which makes for perfection in a holiday resort, the spirit just now as the season attains its high peak is certainly festive. Parties are an every day event with both the hotel playing host to its guests at frequent cocktail hours, and the guests, the majority of whom occupy Ambassador apartments (the hotel maintaining both apartments and suites to accommodate its many guests) finding time for entertaining along with their fun in the sun in Florida vacation.

Recently hosts at a large cocktail party at which they entertained over a hundred friends were the Harold Duane Jacobs, here from Pikesville, Md. The splendid penthouse occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs was the scene of the occasion, which honored Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Epstein Katz, Mrs. Jacob's daughter-in-law and son, here for a visit from N. Y.

Also in the handsome Embassy Room, done over this season in the best of the Empire period, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Robinson, here at the Ambassador from Philadelphia, were hosts at a dinner party for fifty guests.

Also entertaining at large functions were Dr. and Mrs. William Engel from New York City; Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Cudd of Harlan, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Myron Routt from Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Niremburg.

Visiting Palm Beachers at the Harold Duane Jacobs party were Mrs. Samuel Paley, who with Mr. Paley resides in Tangier Avenue during the winter season; Mrs. Abris Silberman, who accompanied her husband to Palm Beach for the opening of the Norton Gallery Old Masters' exhibition, Mr. Silberman having lent the paintings for the show; and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Epstein Katz, here from New York as the guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, who are again occupying their Ambassador Hotel penthouse this season.

Author and authoress—a father-daughter combine—Mr. Benjamin A. Javits and daughter, Joan, pictured at the Ambassador Hotel, where they were guests at a cocktail party at which Mr. and Mrs. Harold Duane Jacobs were hosts. Mr. Javits, an eminent Washington (D. C.) attorney, is also the author of a number of books—his latest, "How the Republicans Can Win in 1952," is due March 15, published by Henry Holt & Co. Daughter Joan, who began writing plays and lyrics when a student at Vassar College a few years ago, has just completed three songs for Pearl Bailey, star of Broadway's revival of "Shuffle Along" and has a musical comedy of her own ready for production. Mr. and Mrs. Javits and their family reside in Palmo Way, Palm Beach.

Riviera Apartments

Season guests at the ultra-modern Riviera Apartments, overlooking Lake Worth, are: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Baker, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Barish, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Behr, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Bernstein and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Blum, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. James Conroy, Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. W. P. Davidson, Jr., and Mrs. W. F. Davidson, of St. Paul, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. James P. Duffy, Rochester, N. Y., and Dr. and Mrs. William Fineshriber, of Philadelphia.

Visiting with his parents at the Riviera Apartments is Mr. William Fineshriber, Jr., of New York City, and Mrs. Fineshriber. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gray and daughter, of Chicago, are season visitors, as are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Greenwald, New York City; Mrs. Herbert B. Kane, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Lontz, Richmond, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. William W. Miller, Rydal, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Raad, accompanied by daughter, Peggy, Salem, W. Va.

PALM BEACH HOTEL

IF YOU HAVE BEEN a faithful reader of these columns about the prettiest hotel in Palm Beach in this season's issues of "Palm Beach Life," you already boast a working knowledge of goings-on, the cultural activity, and most of the architectural and decorative features of the Palm Beach Hotel.

This issue, we'd like to dwell on some of the regular, and a few of the once-in-a-while activities at the Sunrise Avenue vacation headquarters, filled to capacity in recent weeks. You see, the week at the Palm Beach Hotel is arranged to schedule regular features as well as times for experiment and change.

Fridays, as an example of the former, are set aside for Champagne Hours. Champagne is not served, drunk, or awarded, but this was the name tagged to sessions devoted to dancing some years ago, when champagne was awarded, and the name, if not the wine, has stuck. Instead, glittering trophies, less utilitarian but at the same time less inflammable, are presented to the lady and to the gentleman winning the dance championship of each sex each week.

As during the past few seasons, Pat Gioiele conducts the Champagne Hours. A dapper young man who heads the dance studio at the hotel, Pat is also an astute showman and lifts what could be a rather mundane Friday evening into the realm of entertainment, thanks in large measure to a witty tongue well spiced with the flavor of his native Naples. Exhibitions by his staff and volunteers from among the guests precede the contest.

Saturday and Wednesday evenings are formal. The after-dusk activity gets under way at brilliant cocktail parties in the loggia, a room described in the last issue. In an atmosphere breathing elegance and luxury—vine-draped columns, creamy-white walls, delicate fish-tail palms—the garde-manger sets out his colorful, tantalizing wares: a centerpiece of carved ice (hearts for Valentine's Day, log and axe on Washington's birthday), scrumptious hors d'oeuvres, bite-size buffet meats, and, of course, cocktails. Add a few hundred distinguished guests in their finery, and you have a cocktail party at the Palm Beach Hotel.

Later in the evening on Wednesdays and Saturdays, the scene shifts to the West Patio or, on rare nights when the weather forgets it is in Palm Beach, to the Top O' The Palm night club. There, both Dick Gasparre and his society orchestra and the Barad group play for dancing until show time.

The entertainment itself is well-balanced fare, the usual show comprising a lead-off dance team, with a vocalist as the second act and a comedian in the stellar spot. Recent shows have programmed dancers like Mary Raye and Naldi, the nation's number one ballroom duo, the Caribbean Trio, exotic interpreters, and Raoul and Eva Reyes, prime exponents of Latin American dances; songstress Gracie Barrie, Monica Boyar, and Margie Garretson, and comics Alan King, Phil Foster, and Gene Baylos.

Guests are given a "night off" to see after-dark attractions outside the hotel on Sundays.

Monday is gift night, with lucky guests mounting the West Patio stage to collect complimentary gifts from the management.

Almost anything, from a hypnotism demonstration to a March of Dimes appeal, can happen Tuesdays and Thursdays—the "different" nights. Looking through the past few weeks' issues of the "Palm Beach Hotel Register," the hotel's own weekly newspaper, we find a goodly variety of activity for these odd evenings.

One Tuesday recently was devoted to a balloon shower and games. It was scads of fun. The games were old favorites like musical chairs and pass the plate that, despite their ancient vintage, still managed to draw barrelsful of laughs from participants and onlookers.

It was Milo on hypnotism, and the former dean of the American Institute of Hypnotism put three guests into hypnotic and will-less slumber, much to the delight of the audience. On another date, Myrus the mentalist amazed with his mind-reading powers and mental wizardry.

A guest talent show featured the Jesse Greers, he the writer of "Sleepyhead," "Kansas City Kitty," and scores of other popular song hits, and Mrs. Greer, a former musical comedy star who, after a nostalgic performance, turned the show into a successful appeal for the March of Dimes.

And so the evenings pass at the Palm Beach Hotel. If variety be the spice of life, then the Sunrise Avenue establishment surely is the spiciest spot in society's playground!

The Colony Hotel

THE COLONY continues to be the choice of discriminating clientele, whether it is a "home away from home" for the season or a winter holiday, or entertaining friends at luncheon, cocktails, dinner. Contemporary-modern in architecture and decor, embellished with colorful murals of "Old Florida Days", it has the atmosphere of an exclusive club, rather than a hotel.

What "tea time" is to the British, the cocktail hour is to Americans and "cocktail time" at The Colony, is a must for the smart set in Palm Beach. Adding to the enjoyment this season, in the Cocktail Lounge, is the sophisticated music of Herbert Ricci, who is as adept at the piano, as he is playing the accordion and singing... folk songs and the latest Broadway musical hit tunes.

During dinner in the main dining room, Ricci and Alexandra Rosatti, furnish delightful background music; piano, accordion and violin. Listenable music that does not interfere with conversation. They also appear in the Terrace Club, playing for late supper parties.

Among arrivals at The Colony, Prince Nicholas Tumanoff, Mrs. George E. Kulukundis, Mrs. Marusia Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Perkins Bailey, all of New York City.

Marusia, one of America's topflight dress designers, is in Palm Beach for her annual visit, stopping at The Colony. This striking blonde, Polish-born Beverly Hills couturiere, who designs dramatic and chic clothes for socialites all over the country and stars of stage and screen, believes in elegant simplicity. She is a phenomenal designer and a unique one-woman show; combining the American sense of practicality with European artistic flair.

Among celebrities who wear her smart creations: Queen Narriman of Egypt, Mrs. Cobina Wright Sr., Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, Mme. Louis Arpels, Miss Felicia Vanderbilt, Mrs. W. E. Barber, Jeanette McDonald, Mrs. Dana Andrews, Joan Fontaine, Eva Gabor (star of "Blithe Spirit", the Palm Beach Playhouse second play in the eight-week series), Mrs. Robert Cobb, Loretta Young, Mrs. Van Johnson, Mrs. Seymour Nebenzal, Ina Claire, Hedy Lamarr, Louella Parsons, Marina Koshetz.

Marusia drapes and cuts each creation on herself... "material like the human body, has muscles" she declares.

Marusia (Mrs. Marusia Wilson) Polish-born Beverly Hills couturiere, who is always a "box office" designer.

And, she prefers to get the proper "feel" of the fabrics! Her clothes move with the body... she plays up a woman's figure by stressing good points minimizing the less attractive. That, say style authorities, is the test of good designing!

She was literally "talked into designing" for others, when friends admired her own striking, self-created wardrobe. The demand reached such heights that Marusia settled down to a real business and established herself as a custom wholesale couturiere.

In the United States since 1939, she is proud of her American citizenship. Like Schiaparelli, Marusia is a "box office" designer...her creations always make headlines. When she designed a wardrobe for Her Majesty, the Queen of Egypt, she received international acclaim!

Palm Beach Biltmore . . .

CONTINUING AS THE Pacesetter in the smart resort world of Florida's Gold Coast" is the gleaming twin towered Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel. Latest news flash from Daniel E. Taylor's sparkling lakefront hostelry, state that the most fabulous Easter Parade of Fashions yet to be presented here will grace the beautiful palm studded Tropical Terrace on Sunday March 16th.

A long and impressive group of Worth Avenue shops will participate in this pre-view of Easter fashions. The show to be directed by co-ordinator Kay Lowe and will be billed as the Palm Beach Biltmore Easter Parade. The nation's leading style editors, fashion writers plus major newsreels and television artists will assemble at the Biltmore to cover this great fashion parade, presenting to the world at large the Easter fashion story for 1952.

Since hotel and steamship magnate Daniel E. Taylor took over the reins of the Biltmore, Palm Beach is ever being startled by successive new and stimulating happenings. First it was the de luxe Palm Beach Biltmore Hialeah "race special" inaugurated last year, which has proved to be the greatest boon to turf minded colonists on the island. Currently it is the "Ice Musicale" being presented twice nightly in the swank West India Room under the direction of Thomas Doherty. This is the first time in the history of Palm Beach that an ice revue has appeared here. The ice rink set up on the West India Terrace is so arranged that both Terrace and indoor diners can witness this scintillating production. Featuring Illona Vail, Austria's undefeated skater and John Brett international skating star with a talented cast of the world's foremost skaters, it is the most unique and distinctive nitery show ever presented here.

The West India Room which has achieved fame among discriminating gourmets has become noted for the excellence of its French cuisine by chef Georges Mouton with service by John Ricca, formerly of Bradleys. A series of colorful, brilliant floor shows will spotlight its operation during the remainder of the season.

The Biltmore yacht moorings are enjoying a banner year—more of the nation's most luxurious yachts continue to favor the Biltmore docks. T. J. Markley's slim gleaming "Wilmar" from Baton Rouge, Louisiana has returned to port after a leisurely cruise to the Florida keys and Bahamian waters. The Eugene Hynes of Davenport Neck, New Rochelle whose yacht the "Gracefull III" is anchored here spend most of their leisure moments fishing off Key Largo and cruising over to the Cat Key club at Cat Cay for a try at blue marlin and other big game fish. Mrs. Hynes who departed for New York to visit members of her family has returned and with Mr. Hynes is entertaining extensively for their yachting guests Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crabtree of New York. Mrs. Crabtree is the sister of Mr. Hynes. The yacht "Fagala" skippered by Col. and Mrs. Edward Bloomer of East Orange, N. J. is back at the Biltmore docks following a series of visits along the Florida coast. Col. Bloomer is chief of New Jersey's selective service system.

Two of Mr. Taylor's brothers, from Norfolk, Virginia, have arrived at the Biltmore for several weeks accompanied by their wives. They are William and Alfred and the four-some along with the Leslie Taylors have been the incentive for a round of entertainment. Charles F. Broughton, chairman of the board of the Wamsutta Mills and Mrs. Broughton from New Bedford, Massachusetts are at the Biltmore and later will trek over to the West coast prior to returning home. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Egan of Oak Park, Illinois are members of the large honeymoon colony here and spend much of their time on the lakeside tennis courts. Other Oak Park arrivals are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mancuso and Mrs. Joseph J. Griffin one of Palm Beach's favored hostesses.

The Biltmore annually is headquarters for leading members of the Catholic clergy and included in the contingent of Catholic prelates are Bishop Henry J. O'Brien and the Very Rev. Msgr. John Hackett of Hartford, Conn. A threesome from New Brunswick, N. J. are Msgr. William J. Hickey, Father J. A. Harding and Dr. Henry Haywood. Msgr. Thaddeus Tierney of New York, Rev. John L. Sullivan and the Rev. Patrick W. Flynn of Waterbury, Conn. are also enjoying a well earned holiday in the sunny south.

When March 4th winds up the glittering season at Hialeah Park, the Palm Beach Biltmore's Hialeah "race special" now running every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday to the track will be packed away in "moth balls" till another season rolls around. It has been host to resorters from all sections of the country and particularly popular was Dan Taylor's innovation this year of providing reserved seats in the special club car sections which offer atmosphere of an exclusive private club for the turf minded notables heading south to view the great "Sport of Kings".

Smart Restaurants

MAINTAINING THE SAME high standard of fine food, good entertainment and excellent music that has made it a favorite night spot in Palm Beach for more than a score of years, the fashionable Patio Restaurant at Sunset and North County Road continues to click this season, with the elite of the social, business and sports worlds among its well-pleased patrons.

Determined to offer Palm Beachers the best that can be secured in the way of entertainment so that their visit to the Patio will be a joyous one, the management has presented a number of outstanding features, and others have been lined up for the remainder of the season.

One of the outstanding events of the early part of the season was a style show by Martha's, in which Patio patrons were very greatly interested. In fact, every night is fashion night at the Patio, where discriminating guests are seen wearing the styles that will be featured in northern resorts next spring and summer.

Another attraction was the dancing team of George and Betty Montgomery, so graciously loaned by The Breakers Hotel so that Patio guests might see how they do a number of Latin dances.

Balloon showers, always a popular form of fun, have come in for a share of entertainment spotlight, and the surprises that grow and grow and grow have attracted large gatherings to the Patio on Sunday evenings.

The Patio's slogan of "fine food good entertainment and excellent music" has proved a popular one with discriminating resorters, for the club's register continues to carry the "names" that have made Palm Beach famous, and the Patio popular as a place where one might dine and dance under the stars to the tunes of Maestro Val Ernie's music.

A recent evening found many hosts entertaining at dinner parties. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. William Sterling, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. David Berman, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Griffith and Mr. John Newlin.

Another group was made up of Mr. Woolworth Donahue, Mr. James Knott, Mr. Howard Von Gerbig, Mrs. Lorella Hearst, Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, Mrs. Edwina Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Bassett.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Quinn were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. William Waters and Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery. Guests of Mr. Oscar Seabass were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Phillips and Mrs. Belle Sutton.

Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Ferguson had Mr. and Mrs. John Kadel as guests, and dining together were Mrs. Theodore Stemmler, Mr. William Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stewart. Mrs. Ernest Miller and Mrs. Charles Conklin were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dunkel.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Harmon and Mr. Laurence Marx were together, and at another table were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harring, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred LeFeore, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Muller and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Wee.

Now, more than ever before, smart Palm Beach winter colonists are choosing the Florentine Room of the Miramar Restaurant. From 10 p.m. until 3 a.m. there is continuous entertainment in the Florentine Room, and now highlighting the show is June Nelson, Chicago society disease. Miss Nelson's repertoire includes the newest hit tunes from Broadway musical comedies, plus ballads of her own composition. Her song dialect and sophisticated impersonations are smart entertainment at its best.

The Florentine Room features late suppers for the convenience of the after theater crowds, and to assure perfection in service, all facilities of the Miramar are open until the small morning hours.

The bar and lounge, where Larry, master barman, presides, is available for those who come in for a nightcap.

Authentic Florentine importations embellish the Florentine Room which is intimate and cozy. Subdued lighting emanates from wall panels depicting the crests of noted Florentine families.

An early dinner is served at the Miramar for theater goers who attend performances at the Palm Beach Playhouse. Special dishes are noted on the menu for these occasions, as well as for the late suppers.

Noted at the Miramar were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn, Jr., Mrs. Lorelle Hearst, Mr. Howell Van Gerbig, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Peck, Mr. Edward C. Garratt, Miss D. Lorraine Yerkes, Mrs. Isabelle M. O'Brien, Mr. Jerry Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gubelmann, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cernadas, Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Pope, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Souther, Mr. and Mrs. William Kingsley Swan, Mrs. Margaret Dressler Nohowel, Mr. Onestus Patrick Uzzell, Mr. Chester Dale, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, Mrs. Cruz de Bethencourt, Miss Pilar de Bethencourt, Mr. and Mrs. Donald S. Leas Jr., Mr. and Mrs. George H. Souther Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey Curran Jr., Mrs. Jennie Fabyan, Mrs. Victor D. ## PETITE MARMITE

The charming, intimate Petite Marmite Restaurant, with its sunny, open patio with umbrella covered tables, and cozy closed dining room, is equipped to cater to patrons in any kind of weather. Out in the patio, where trees growing among the tables give the effect of a country estate, guests are regaled with the famous Scampi Shrimp, Breast of Chicken Maison and frog legs for which Petite Marmite is famous.

Inside the dining room, where guests prefer to gather on nippy evenings, the atmosphere is that of a French chalet, with viands in keeping.

In this, the third season Petite Marmite has occupied its Worth Arcade location, Headwaiter Gregory and Chef Gus, co-owners of the establishment, have wined and dined many Palm Beach notables in recent weeks. Among guests noted at luncheon and dinner recently are:

Mrs. John Archbold, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Emile Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. C. Markham Langham, Mrs. Mary Knowholl, Mr. and Mrs. Max Pray, Mr. and Mrs. John Coleman and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Crocker.

Col. and Mrs. John Monahan, Mrs. Dan Topping, Mr. Philip Shell, Mr. John Perona, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Owen Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney King Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley R. Reynolds, Jr., and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Larson; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cisco. Mrs. Grace Allen, Mrs. Fred Osley, Princess Rospigliosi, Francesa Rospigliosi, Mrs. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Hall, Mrs. John C. King, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Humphreys, Mrs. Margaret Emerson, Mrs. M. Lindsey and Mr. and Mrs. A. Parker Bryant.

THE MUSIC BOX

At the Music Box it's Sandra Kiraly, continental songstress of amazing versatility who is just now adding embellishment to entertainment. With Peter Carew, master of smart entertainment, the Mary Wood Trio-Mary, Freddie and Tony, tops in their rendition of dinner and dance music and Charlie Wright, genial, homespun personality troupier who gets the sweetest music imaginable from reeds and bellows of the accordion, the artists keep a merry-go-round of fun and frolic going on night after night, as the Music Box entertains a capacity audience of diners and winers.

Recently at the Music Box were Miss D. Lorraine Yerkes, Mrs. Isabelle O'Brien, Mr. Edward C. Garrett, Mr. Charles Freeman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Drexel Duke, Mr. and Mrs. George Frick, Mrs. Jane Obolensky, Mr. Herbert Farrell, Jr., Mr. Grover Loening, Mr. Channing Hare, Mr. Hopkins Hensel, Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Spaulding, Mrs. George Allyn Fort, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Van Husen, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Dempsey, Mrs. Joseph S. Moran, Mrs. Harry Ewington Childs, Miss Sophie Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Routt, Mr. and Mrs. Ward L. Atwood, and Mr. Francis Gardner.

THE SCAMPI RESTAURANT

Winter colonists and local residents have discovered a pleasurable combination of excellent food and fine music at the new Scampi Restaurant at Boynton Beach. Mrs. Jean M. Grella is the owner. The new spot, which boasts continental food and service, is under the same management as the famous Miramar Restaurant in Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y.

Among those who have dined, wined and listened to the music of Violinist Vincenzo Castellano and Pianist Mario Jazzetti are the Algernon Browns, the Stewart Igleharts, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shields, the John Moores, Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pope, the Ken Montgomerys, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Y. Grayson, Peter Perkins, Mrs. Henrietta Topping, the Bob Blakes, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pflugfelder, Dr. and Mrs. R. G. Fritz, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Triest, Mr. and Mrs. Aspenwald of Sands Point, N. Y., Mr. James Moffit of Delray Beach and party of ten, Mayor and Mrs. F. L. Purington of Boynton Beach, Mr. Paul Mercer, Mr. Douglas Gandy, Mr. Charles Williamson, Mr. Jim Wooden of Boynton Beach, Mr. Jay Shattock of Delray Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Avy Barrell Smith, Mrs. Wm. H. Evans, Mrs. Rene La Montagne of Palm Beach, Mr. Tony Cabot of Boca Raton Club and party of nine, Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown of Gulf Stream, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Canahay 3rd of Delray Beach, Mr. Len Ruskin, TV Guide, Mr. and Mrs. E. Gasperini of New York.

The Scampi Restaurant had a Fashion Show, attended by about two hundred thirty guests, for the benefit of the Damon Runyon Cancer, Fight Cancer, Inc., of Florida.

Popular members of the winter colony as well as year 'round residents of Delray Beach modeled. They were Mrs. W. Cottingham Allen, Mrs. Harold Bond, Mrs. William LaPorte, Mrs. James Jones, Mrs. Leland Sterry, Mrs. Roy L. Calamia, Mrs. Kermit Robinson, Miss Phyllis Klinger, and Miss Mary Lee Yates, who was selected Miss International of Florida last year.

NINO'S CONTINENTAL

Nino's Continental, more than ever, is the spot where the social set dine. This season the Capri Room has been the center of chic entertainment. Due to the large increase of parties given here, two large rooms on the second floor have been redecorated suitable for cocktail and dinner parties—The Fiesta Room and the Cafe Parisien.

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Guest entertained Mr. and Mrs. T. Basset, Mrs. L. Hearst, Mr. H. Van Gerbig, Mrs. Edmund Martin and Mrs. E. E. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. Shields, gave a large dinner party in honor of Mrs. Gary Cooper, on her arrival here, in the Capri Room. Mr. Woolworth Donahue, who has a steady reservation for the table 'royale' in the Capri Room, has only once released his table for the night. Mr. Howell Van Gerbig, recently entertained Mrs. Lorelle Hearst, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Guest, and Mrs. Esmund Martin.

Mr. Peter Pulitzer preferred a game dinner for his guests. In the party were Miss Elsie Griffin, Mr. Edwin Perona, Miss Mary Griffin, Mr. Philip Shell, Miss Joyce Jacobsen, Mr. and Mrs. John Fenno, and Mr. Tony Chopitea.

Other gourmets entertaining very often in the Capri Room are: Mr. Charles A. Munn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, Mr. and Mrs. David Leggett, Mr. and Mrs. D. Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Prudden, Jr., Mr. E. Perona and his house guest Mr. Philip Shell, Mr. King Stone, Mr. and Mrs. George Rasmussen, Mr. Paul Butler, Mrs. C. E. Merrill, Mr. Theodore Solainos of the Greek Line, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cernadas, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Comerford, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Gurnee Munn Sr., Countess Maximilien de Pulaski were busy working on a degustation of Nino's famous 100 year old Napoleon Cognac.

Luncheon a la terrace is getting very popular. Nino's cold buffet and the poissoniere is the attraction of the gourmets in the winter colony. Luncheon is served from 12:00 until 2:30.

Delray Beach went all out when a Ramon Runyon Cancer Fund benefit was staged. The campaign opened at the Scampi Restaurant in Boynton Beach. The Gulf Stream Polo Club continued the benefit theme the following day at a doubleheader at the field. Delray's lovely ladies served as models in the Scampi fashion show. Mrs. Kermit Robinson models an afternoon cotton frock trimmed with wooden accessories and carries the popular wicker handbag. Mrs. A. Cottingham Allen modeled a casual cotton sunback dress which could be converted into a strapless gown. Mrs. James Jones shows a print and pretty smile. More than 250 persons attended the show at the Scampi.

Appraisal of An Artist

A. Everett Austin Jr, director of the John and Mabel Ringling Museum at Sarasota, Florida, long-time friend of Pavel Tchelitchev, here expresses thoughts on the artist who is exhibiting at the Worth Avenue Gallery.

IT IS THE PRIMARY FUNCTION of the artist, any artist, to interest and, if possible, enthrall the spectator, any spectator. He achieves his end with the aid of his ideas, which are in turn made clear to the spectator through his technique, his language, the painter's specific mode of communication. His sentences are composition; his words, colors; and his punctuation, drawing. Uninteresting ideas can never be wholly concealed by a merely brilliant technique; neither can valid ideas be satisfactorily revealed should the painter fail to become master of that specific language of his own that fully reveals him. We demand of a painter, then, that he hold our attention, that he force us to travel with him along those new paths he himself is investigating, and present to us the possibility of the enjoyment of an ever newly discovered beauty, which we may share with him.

In these things Tchelitchev never disappoints, his every performance equally imposing; and for the past twenty-five years he has never ceased to be of interest, always moving into a new realm of ideas.

As a designer for the theater, though he has not lately been active in that medium, he has created unforgettable gossamer fantasies, and as a draughtsman of endless variety he has, in our time, few peers, whether they be of academic, romantic or abstract persuasions.

The exhibition at the Worth Avenue Gallery shows Tchelitchev to be a master of all these modes. From the almost convulsive poetry of the earlier examples, through the silver point exactitudes, and delicacies of the middle periods, to the almost mathematical control of line in the latest works, this power over the material of his craft is evident.

Tchelitchev was born in Moscow, September 21, 1898, and lived as a child near Kaluga. His father came from a very old Russian family and was a Doctor of Higher Mathematics, a lover of Pythagoras, and of Nature, and, because of his vast forests, was called in Russian "The King of the Forests." How much of the painter's later magic was evolved from these memories of childhood may be surmised in these brief glimpses of it, for he tells us that:

"During the long winter afternoons I would sit, breathless, in front of the open fire listening to the marvels and wonders of the old Russian folklore,—the myths and fairytales and ballads and sagas told to me by Feodor, the gardener. (The gardener is the guardian of the cycle of the life of plants and trees. In the one hand he has the seeds of life, in the other the shears of death.) Then as the tale went on, I would look at the fire tongs and see them transformed into heroes; legendary deeds would be performed against the flaming background of untold and everchanging wonderlands.

Ink and water—Drawing 1944, Tchelitchev

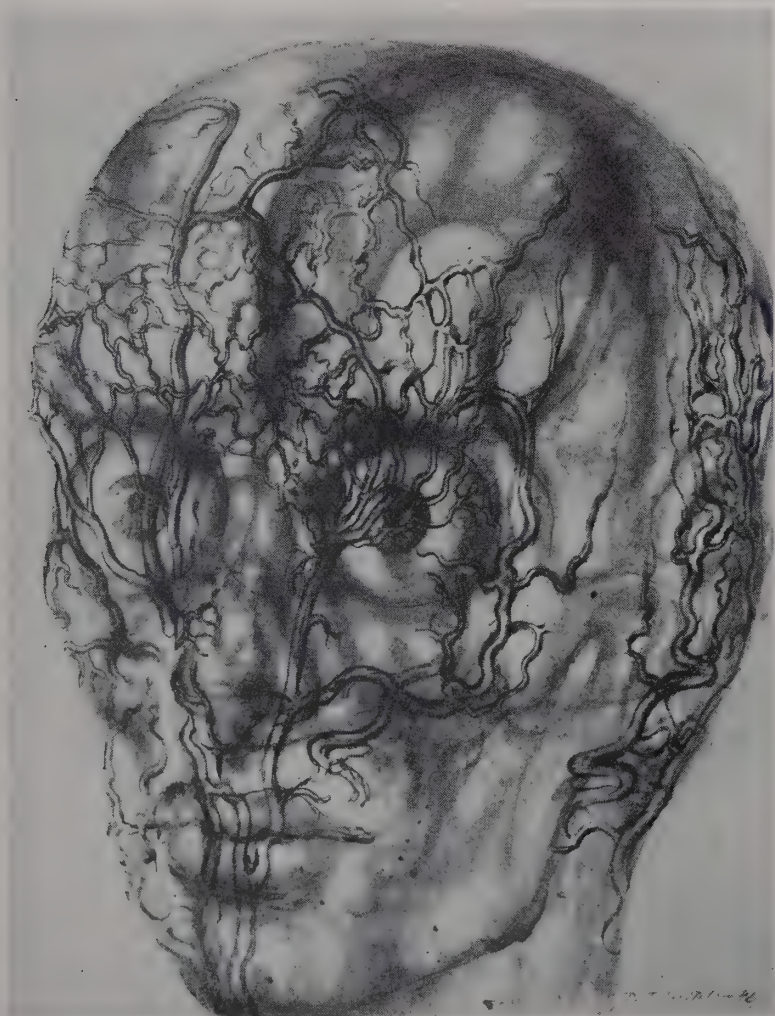

Then, one day, when still very small, I fell in love with a box of Windsor and Newton's watercolors which I found on the desk of my Uncle Sergei. He was an engineer, and was for me a sort of magician who loved me and spoiled me greatly. He was a great traveller and would send me toys from abroad. I loved these animal toys in kid, or leather, or felt. The more I loved them the more I wanted to know what was inside them. But always, after poking my penknife or Nania's scissors into them, I would find only sawdust or straw. Seeing me then in tears, Nania would take a big needle and sew them up again; but the white thread would remind me forever of the operation I had performed, and I would no longer want to play with these toys. They would be definitely discarded. So, from my early days, I knew that there were enigmas that perish when wrongly investigated."

From the age of 9 Tchelitchev began to develop his technique in watercolor, and from his schooldays, too, dates his great infatuation for the theater, especially the opera and ballet. He was constantly obsessed with his determination to become a painter, and his eventual joy may be imagined, when, after the Revolution, he found himself in Kiev, befriended by the young artists of that town, who were also stage designers. Here, for the first time, he was able to support himself, working at night after the small cabaret-theater (in the Chauve-Souris style) had closed, painting on the decors and dying materials for the costumes.

After further experience as a designer in the theaters of Sofia and Constantinople, Tchelitchev made his way to Berlin, where he designed settings and costumes for the "Savonarola" of Gobinaux under the influence of his friends and fellow-countrymen, the Constructivists, Malevitch and Lizitski. His work for the Berlin stage culminated in the designs for "Le Coq d'Or" at the Staatsoper.

The magnet of the theater now drew him in 1923 to Paris where he met and became friends with many Americans, notably Gertrude Stein, whose affection and patronage were to become of profound importance to his later career. Here his painting began to show a reaction to the current angular style of Cubism and Constructivism, and to take on those aspects of the new poetry, purified of its decadent Romantic sentimentality which was to be in general the goal of the Neo-Romantics and Surrealists alike.

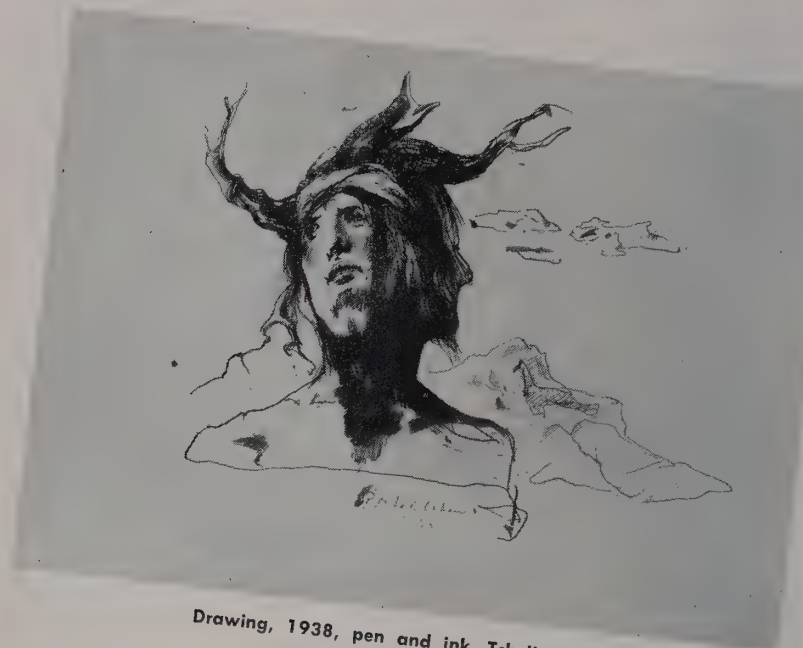

In 1928 he was commissioned by Diaghilev to do the designs for the ballet "Ode." His work thus became known to a wider audience, and from that moment the name of Tchelitchev was more and more seen and heard—in London, Paris and New York (where he arrived in 1934). The great canvases of Phenomena (1936-1938), at the moment in Saratoga, and Hide and Seek (1940-1942), owned by the Museum of Modern Art in New York; the ballet Noblissima Visione (1938); the Paper Ball in Hartford (1936); Gluck's Orfeo for the Metropolitan Opera (1936); Giraudoux's Ondine for Louis Jovet (Paris, 1939); and the countless drawings, and paintings all illustrate vividly, the artist's unique evolution.

In the Worth Avenue Gallery's current exhibition, we see reflections of many of these contributory phases. We find for the most part heads of actual or imaginary beings divorced from their bodies. This decapitation, this mutilation so to speak, of the ideal whole has been practiced by artists since earliest times. It is a very interesting phenomenon when one stops to think of it, for it results from a passionate desire to concentrate on the most revealing and most emotional aspect of ourselves. It is also the most personal, and can be the most ideal. The Greeks conceived the idea of the perfect physiognomy. They also conceived of the perfect form for a vase. The two were often not entirely dissimilar. Mathematics played a considerable part in Tchelitchev's search for perfection. Perhaps that may be the clue to this particular group of achievements from the drawings of the late twenties to the constructions of the past few years. A further clue is offered by the painter's own words:

"Working on Hide and Seek, and observing, how, in the autumn, the leaves change and how they become more and more transparent, I conceived the idea of the Four Seasons, which show the life-cycle of a tree, of a life like day and night—like the four ages of our own lives. I came to the conclusion that winter must be the least dense of all the seasons, and there and then I found myself, from the metamorphic point of view, not only inside a leaf, but also inside a human body, conceived as a crystal vase.

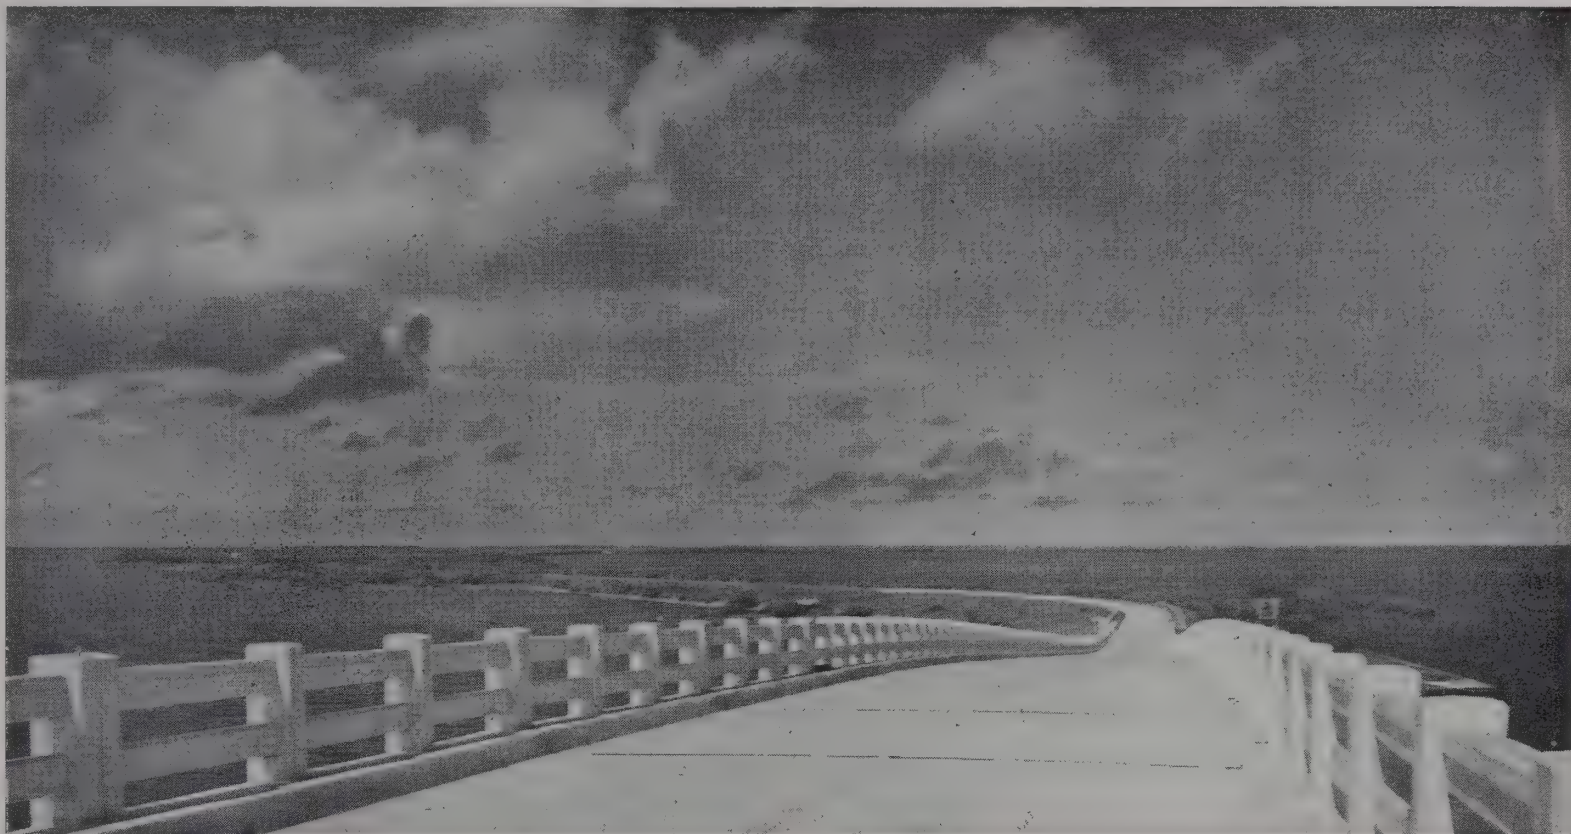

"From 1943 to 1949 I made further researches into this crystal vase, with the help of drawings and paintings I call

"Interior" landscapes. The grasp of the total form of the human being through anatomy, as in a transparent crystal vase, would let one's eyes see through it all, unimpeded. From that vision I arrived at the idea of the reversibility of the space inside the vase, which, because of its transparency, would permit a coming and going—the beginning and pulsation of the life of the object. The front recedes to the back and the back comes to the front, unimpeded.

"I found the greatest difficulty in keeping the realistic form of the human head, which prevented me from achieving that state of coming and going. I then commenced to look for a simpler form, a form that would still be full of emotional content, but, through the use of simpler lines, would express the idea of continuity. Thus, finally, I came to the idea of the vibration of the spiral line. But before that, I had to remember again the idea I had left suspended in 1928—of the wire basket, kitchenware, as a sketch of the human head."

Art in the twentieth century has indeed found itself struggling between the poles of Classicism and Romanticism—the horns of the great dilemma. The magic of the impenetrable forest and the Pythagorean formulae have here again worked their spell. Destiny has forced Tchelitchev to become still another mirror of the split artistic personality of our time.

An overseas highway grew from Henry Morrison Flagler's idea of a railroad spanning the sea from Miami to Key West, and today a steady caravan of cars cross the span of ocean daily as one of the world's wonders of engineering takes them to the southernmost point of the country.

40 YEARS AGO

THE ENTIRE WORLD WAS TALKING of America's gigantic railroad engineering feat—the Overseas Railroad, built through the perseverance of one man, Henry M. Flagler. Perhaps the greatest saga in railroad history, when in 1912 the steel highway connecting New York with Key West and opening easy access to Cuba, the West Indies and linking more closely the North and South American continents, it was referred to as “the eighth Wonder of the World.”

Defying treacherous tides and ferocious hurricanes, and at great loss of men and materials, the railroad was finally completed and a tremendous celebration with Mr. Flagler as the principal speaker held at Key West in late January of 1912.

Some years later tropical hurricanes lashed the railroad into the sea. But its foundations remained, and today, thanks to Mr. Flagler, tourists are able to reach the remote islands sweeping out into the Caribbean over that very railroad converted to a highway during the lean depression years when government projects created jobs for thousands of unemployed.

But back in 1912, when railroads as a means of transportation had not been superseded by the automobile, hopes ran high for the sea-going railroad and it was hailed as “the greatest engineering feat accomplished in the history of the world.”

Thus the Palm Beach Daily News devoted many columns to the great celebration that opened the extension, and to its tremendous economic value to two continents, as follows:

Jan. 24—“On Tuesday last at Key West in the presence of many of the great ones of the earth there occurred what will be carried down in history as the happy consummation of perhaps the greatest feat of engineering that the human mind has ever conceived, in the completion of the Florida East Coast Railway's Over-the-Sea extension.

“The extension, spanning the Florida Keys, creating another momentous link joining the United States with the southern hemisphere, will be an ever-living monument to the genius of Mr. Henry M. Flagler, whose far-seeing mind conceived such a possibility.

“The significance of this event is far beyond our ken. It means that the excursionist and the businessman will be able to travel from New York, Chicago or St. Louis, for example, by an all-rail route direct to Key West.

“Also it is not difficult to foresee that transportation of freight from both South and North American ports will be made via Key West, and as Mr. Flagler said in his address at the Over-Sea Railway celebration, it is not fanciful to believe that in ten years the population of Key West will be 50,000.

“In celebration of the event the largest congressional delegation that has been sent to any state in the history of the country attended exercises to celebrate opening of the extension. En route back to Washington the delegation stopped in Palm Beach last night [Thursday, Jan. 25, 1912] where members were served dinner at the Royal Poinciana and later entertained at Whitehall, Mr. Flagler's palatial Palm Beach home.

“Nearly every state in the Union was represented by a senator or a congressman, and there were in addition a number of notable naval and military officers.”

HOW TO PROFIT THROUGH TAX EXEMPTION

Taxes are high today — may get higher tomorrow. If you're in a fairly high bracket and don't know how to profit through tax exempt securities, NOW IS THE TIME TO LEARN!

If your taxable income is over $16,000 you may be paying taxes, under present laws, of from 40% to 90% on some of your investments. You may be well repaid by an investigation of tax-exempt State and Municipal bonds. Yields on such investments can bring you as much net return as taxable securities yielding 8% or more.

OUR NEW BOOKLET, "HOW TO PROFIT THROUGH TAX-EXEMPTION"

explains in plain language your need for tax exemption, tells how much tax-exempt bonds can be worth to you. There's no obligation. Send for your copy today.

The Colony, which is open all-year-round, is one of the most important hotels in Palm Beach. Although modern in architecture and decor, it has more the atmosphere of an old Southern manse than a hotel. Southern hospitality at its best, with gracious service the noted "hallmark" of the entire hotel. The perfect "home away from home."

"BUT
I SAID
OYSTERS!"

In planning a Will—as in placing an order!—you get better results if you make everything clear at the start.

So don't skimp on details when you sit down with your advisors. Draw them a clear, rounded picture of your wishes, property, business and family situation. Remember, they know only what you tell them—and must have all the facts if your Will is to give your family all the protection it's capable of giving...

Remember, too, that we've had a wide experience in the financial aspects of planning Wills. So when you plan yours, let us help—in cooperation, naturally, with your lawyer.

Spring Comes Early to the Greenbrier!

The buds bud earlier... the sprigs sprig earlier... yes, spring comes earlier to The Greenbrier! 6000 acres of rolling hills and verdant valleys blooming with the magic of spring's first touch!

There's golf on any of Greenbrier's three magnificent courses... tennis on championship courts... riding... and the exhilarating baths at the Spa. Nights are charming, too, with matchless Meyer Davis dance music and the gay camaraderie of fun-loving folk, in an over-all atmosphere of laughter and gaiety. And for the "rest" of your life, there's nothing like the quiet elegance of your Dorothy Draper decorated suite.

Spring comes early to The Greenbrier... so won't you come early, too! Rates from $15 per day, per person—including Greenbrier's incomparable meals.

Pertaining to DELRAY BEACH SHORES

May I:

Have your attention for a few minutes of your valuable reading time and present for your pleasure — “an announcement of our present new project — and “news” of our next development” — and extend to you a cordial invitation to “inspect our properties at your convenience”.

Delray Beach Shores:

A complete residential community. Something new and something different — “each lot a water-front property”, and located less than one-half mile South of Delray Beach on South Ocean Boulevard. This development is practically complete with only 70 water-front homesites, and located just across the street from the ocean, with one-half mile of choice property — of which one-quarter mile faces Ocean Boulevard and one-quarter mile on the deep Florida Intra-Coastal Waterway. Lots now priced at $6,000.00 each, and upwards.

Then -- our next -- “And we hope, history-making development” --

We are proud to present -- “The Presidential Colony of America.”

The land has already been conveyed to this company. Strictly an apartment area. Each building will be carefully planned and erected to “typify the particular period of architecture of each President”, and to be named in sequence for each of our former Presidents. For instance — “The Mount Vernon” for George Washington; “The Brick Colonial” for Thomas Jefferson; “The Log Cabin type for Abraham Lincoln”; and so forth.

Each building is to be of two stories in height, and to consist of four to twelve units in each building.

Our Executive Office will be “an exact replica” of The White House and will be used in the future as “The Administrative Building”.

Plans for “this coming historical development” are now in progress for 1953 completion.

. . . just ABOVE your midtown activities

You need not walk blocks, nor ride taxis from your appointments in New York. Just a few steps, then a swift elevator ride, and you're relaxing in your quiet, comfortable hotel suite or room, far above Manhattan's busy whirl . . . yet so close to its diverse attractions.

To suit your every mood and requirement, these three superior hotels offer you a diversity of accommodations, with an uncompromising standard of service. Next time you visit New York, stop at The Biltmore, Park Lane, or The Barclay.

(The Barclay and Park Lane offer a limited number of furnished apartments on seasonal or annual lease, featuring pantries with refrigeration.)

OLDSMOBILE "88" "ROCKET"

Rocketing up-UP-UP to the greatest heights in Oldsmobile history! It's Oldsmobile's new "Rocket" Engine Super "88"—the climax of ten years' planning and work—truly an all-time great among motor cars.

There's a new "Rocket" Engine Car for every budget! Oldsmobile's new "88"
Series starts at prices just above the lowest, with four great models to choose from. Each new "88" is powered by the new gas-saving "Rocket" Engine! Each offers new smoother-than-ever Oldsmobile Hydra-Matic Drive as optional equipment at moderate extra cost. From any angle . . . from every angle . . . the Oldsmobile "Rocket 88" is the outstanding value leader in it's field
